Pea Pickin' May Replace Cotton Pickin' in Bootheel

Pea pickers, corn huskers and peachpluckers likely will invade the cotton-pickin' Missouri Delta Area in southeast Missouri as a result of a recent feasibility study.

The study, "The Economic Feasibility of Commercial Fruit and Vegetable Production and Processing in The Missouri Delta," was instigated to determine the economic feasibility of producing fruits and vegetables and the practicality of establishing one or more processing plants in the traditionally cotton-growing areas.

The report wad made by the University of Missouri Agricultural Experiment Station in cooperation with the Economic Research Service, U. S. Department of Agriculture as a result of a request for technical assistance by the Missouri Division of Commerce and Industrial Development.

The Economic Development Administration, U. S. Department of Commerce, provided a substantial share of costs for conducting the study engineered by Prof. Tom Brown, Agricultural Economics, University of Missouri, and James L. Pearson, Economic Research Service, USDA, University of Fla.

The study cites the seven-county Missouri Delta for its abundance of level productive land, unlimited water for irrigation and large, well-financed farm units, all of which provide the needed resources for vegetable production.

The authors point out that production and processing of vegetables are economically feasible.

Cotton acreage has declined 20 percent in the Delta since 1950 and rapid adoption of mechanical cotton pickers has greatly reduced the labor required on remaining cotton acreage; consequently, fewer jobs are available in the area, particularly for seasonal day labor.

Findings indicate that production of vegetable raw materials would increase net and gross farm income of the area by almost $75,000 and $395,000 respectively.

The analysis reveals that seasonal day laborers currently underemployed on farms in the area would be able to work an additional 102,000 hours in the production of vegetable crops. This would, according to the study, increase their income $61,200 annually.

Researchers brought together data from various informational sources relative to the production, processing and marketing of fruits and vegetables. Based on this information, a group of products was selected for further analysis of economic feasibility of production and processing.

In a processing plant analysis, specifications for a freezing plant and canning plant were developed. Buildings, equipment and variable input requirements were obtained in detail. Costs and returns for annual operation of each plant were computed. Resultant profits, after deduction of corporate income taxes, provided the necessary measurements of processing feasibility.

Fruits and vegetables have been grown in the Delta for several years. Production generally has been limited to the fresh market, though some producers have grown products for processors. No fruit and vegetable processing facilities presently are located in the area.

A group of interested farmers and businessmen in southeast Missouri is actively seeking processors interested in the Delta.

The growing number of program participators have enlisted temporary services of the Missouri Delta Development Corporation, Portageville, until a permanent organization of farmers can be established.

The seven counties form a fairly homogeneous economic area in terms of soil, cropping patterns and socio-economic features. Farm land in the area totals 2, 119,000 acres, 83 percent in cropland.

Soils of the area are alluvial, having been formed by the Mississippi, Ohio and St. Francis Rivers. Approximately 50 percent of the soil is fine sandy loam, the other half ranging from light blow sand to heavy gumbo clays. The entire area is underlain with water for irrigation at depths of less than 60 feet.

The operator of the motorcycle, Louis Denno, 17, of Route 4, Joplin, was critically injured. The machine collided with a car driven by David Glen Webster, 25, Tulsa, Okla. Webster was not injured.

Mrs. Glenda Bell Wilson, 24, St. Louis was killed Saturday when the car she was driving ran off U.S. 67 in Farmington.

Stoddard County Farmers Sell $23 Million in Products

By O. C. MILLER
OZARK NEWS BUREAU

WASHINGTON, D. C. -- Farmers of Stoddard county sell $23,361,601 worth of their products a year, a preliminary report of the recent Census of Agriculture showed.

This is about $11,491 per farm, or an increase of $3,000 per farm over the earnings reported by the previous Census of Agriculture. Field crops accounted for more than $19 million of the products while livestock, and livestock products, including poultry and dairy products, accounted for the remainder.

The census disclosed that 113 farms in Stoddard county sell more than $40,000 each a year, while 348 farms have sales of between $10,000 and $20,000 a year. But 329 farms sell between $2,500 and $5,000 worth of farm products each year.

The county has 2,033 farms which is about 500 fewer farms than reported by the previous five-year Census. The average size of farms in the county was given as 212.5 acres, which is about 50 acres larger than the average size of the farms at the time of the previous five-year census.

The average value of the farmland per acre was reported by the census to be $283 per acre. This was $106 per acre more than the value as reported by the previous Census of Agriculture.

The census discloses that the average value of the farm, including land and buildings, in Stoddard county is $59,042. This is more than twice the value per farm as reported by the previous five-year census, which was $28,439.

Though the average farm was found to contain 212 acres, some were much larger and some smaller. There were 370 farms with acreage from 10 to 40 and 266 farms with an average acreage between 70 and 100 acres. The largest number of farms (327) have between 260 and 500 acres. Thirty-six had between 1,000 and 2,000 acres.

The census disclosed that 850 farms in the county grow mostly grain, and 263 are mainly cotton farms. The number of livestock farms was 244.

The census surveyed more than 1,000 farm owners in the county, and found all were white except five. A survey of part owners, a total of more than 500, showed five of these were Negroes.

Out of more than 1,800 farm operators reported by the census, all except 159 live on the farms they operate, while the 159 live elsewhere.

More than 800 operators were found to have non-farm jobs as well as farm jobs. Of this number about 475 worked more than 100 days a year at the non-farm jobs.

The farmers of the county sell 301,816 dozen eggs a year, and also more than 3 million pounds of whole milk.

Woman Wounded by Police Responding to Treatment

POST FALLS, Idaho AP - Lillian Jo Ramus, the young woman who charged out of a motel room, spraying bullets from a gold-plated M1 carbine at policemen and FBI agents, lay seriously wounded today but was responding to treatment.

One FBI agent was wounded in the shoot-out just before midnight Saturday before the 28-year-old woman fell with bullet wounds in the head and left hip. After emergency surgery at a hospital in Spokane, Wash., 20 miles away, she was taken off the critical list.

"After we told her to come out, she opened and closed the motel door several times, then fired a single shot inside the room, apparently to make us think she had shot herself," said FBI special agent Robert Rockwell of Coeur d'Alene, who was shot in the leg.

"We told the officers over the bull horn to stay back, then she opened the door and started firing," he said. There were "almost a hundred" officers surrounding the motel, said the wife of the owner, Mrs. David Doty.

The sawed-off M1 carbine had been fitted with a pistol handle so it could be used as a hand gun. Her wild flurry of shooting sent bullets through a screen door into Rockwell's car and flattened the tires on her own automobile.

The officers then opened fire with pistols, rifles and a shotgun. Miss Ramus fell to the ground, screaming. Police found a loaded 38-caliber revolver in her clothing, and a 22-caliber rifle and a .44 magnum carbine inside the room, along with ammunition for all the weapons and a fountain-pen tear-gas gun.

Authorities had been looking for Miss Ramus since last September 13, when she and Johan M. Bosley, 29, of Spokane, both held on forgery charges, used smuggled - in hacksaw blades to saw through the bars on a cell window in the Spokane city jail.

They jumped from their third-floor cell window to the roof of the men's quarters on the second floor, then two stories to the ground. Miss Bosley was seriously injured in the last jump and was left behind.

Miss Ramus and three other persons were accused of counterfeiting $40,000 worth of $20 bills, and printing $5,000 worth of fake unemployment, welfare and railroad pay checks. She is also charged with armed robbery in the $1,325 holdup of a market in a Seattle suburb.

Officers had watched the motel room all Saturday afternoon, hoping she might come outside. Her brother and an unidentified man visited her for several hours. Police said she apparently had returned to the Northwest to visit relatives.

Soviets Pull Teams out of U.S. Meets

MOSCOW (AP)—The Soviet Union announced today its track and field and basketball teams will not play against the United States this year in protest against the United States fighting Viet Nam, the official soviet news agency, Tass., reported.

The Soviet men's and women's track team was scheduled to meet the United States in Los Angeles July 23-24.

An American basketball team is in training in the United States for a trip to Russia.

In addition to the Russians, a Polish men's and women's track team was scheduled to compete against the United States in Berkeley, Calif., July 16-17.

An earlier report from Warsaw said the Polish team was planning to leave Wednesday for California.

A spokesman for the U.S. Embassy said that it had not been officially notified of the Soviet decision. The embassy had no immediate comment.

Earlier, the embassy had reported that about 100 Soviet track athletes had been granted visas for the United States. There had been no indication that the Russians would pull out.

The American basketball team of 13 players was due to come to Russia for a series of eight games, starting July 25 in Moscow. The team was to play here after games in East Europe.

Such decisions as the two teams reportedly took are made in this country only with Communist party approval — and often at party instigation.

Man Fatally Wounded Resisting Son's Arrest

NEWBURG, Mo. AP -- Walter Henson, 59, of Newburg, was shot to death Saturday night during a fight with two city officers who had arrested Henson's son.

Charles Slawson, city marshal and his deputy, Lester Slawson, arrested Jack Henson, 22, for a traffic violation.

The highway patrol said the elder Henson knocked the marshal down outside a pool hall and was starting to take the officer's gun when the deputy fired twice with a .32 caliber automatic pistol.

Henson, hit in the chest and arm, died on the way to a hospital.

$600,000.00 is a lot of money. Yet, all of us in the Hospital service area would be glad to give that much money if it were to save the lives of our loved ones.

In order to build the new wing to our hospital, all of us must give a generous amount- as if it were to save our lives. We can do it.

2,751,000 Missourians Eligible to Vote in Fall

WASHINGTON, D. C. -- Missouri will have 2,751,000 persons old enough to vote (21 years old) in the election this fall, information released by the Bureau of the Census shows.

This will be 117,000 more than were old enough to vote in the last presidential election.

The bureau study projects the population for 1968 and claims that the state will have 2,777,000 old enough to vote in the 1968 presidential election. This will be 301,000 more than were eligible in 1964.

However, all Missourians do not go to the polls and vote, or at least have not in the past. The Bureau of Census reported that in 1964 two - thirds of those old enough to vote did for president. Only 65 persons out of 100 voted for representative in the House. In 1962 only 45 percent of those of eligible age voted for representative.

The glass container industry in this country employs more than 60,000 people working in 107 plants in 25 states.

THE AGENCY AGAIN

Sen. J. William Fulbright (D Ark.) promises on Thursday, July 14, to demand a showdown vote on his plan to place the CIA under broader congressional scrutiny.

FOR MANY YEARS the Fun Thing in Washington has been to poke fun at The Agency. What is meant is the Central Intelligence Agency, the only government agency in the nation's capital which is automatically given capital letters in cocktail and other conversation.

Unfortunately, The Agency gives plenty of occasion for this kind of chaffing. Its arrogance is notorious; its hiding behind Department of State credentials -- even to wives' charge accounts at Washington department stores -- approaches ostrichism; its double-dealings, even limited to those on record, are numerous. It is accused of acting beyond its mandate, of spending lavishly.

In a remarkable hostile book -- and the CIA has had plenty of those written about it -- the authors of "The Invisible Government" (1964) say that the nation "spends about $4 billion a year" on the CIA. They go on:

"The exact figure is one of the most tightly held secrets of the government and it appears in none of the federal budget documents, public or private. It is unknown, in fact, even to many of the key figures in the Invisible Government. Because the intelligence community is carefully fragmented, those in one branch find it difficult to estimate the budgets of the others."

NOW ALL THESE CHARGES may be considered as nothing when one acknowledges that the subject is the central source of secret information about all one's national enemies -- and, for that matter, friends. Spying is always a dirty business and usually an embarrassing thing for a democracy. Much of the work of the CIA is research, some of which is pedestrian, and some of which is quite shrewd. Only in its "black" operations and in its "Department of Dirty Tricks" does it lay itself open to criticism.

But here the criticism is real, vital, and continuing. On Thursday Sen. J. William Fulbright is going to ask for a showdown vote in the Senate on a proposal that would increase congressional surveillance of CIA. The scheme would add representatives of the Foreign Relations Committee to representatives of two other powerful Senate committees, Armed Services and Appropriations, who now watch the operations of the national spy agency. The new group would be called the Select Committee on Intelligence Operations.

NUMEROUS ATTEMPTS have been made in Congress, far too many to be listed here, to put a shorter rein on The Agency. The answer invariably is that the House Armed Services subcommittee and the corresponding Senate subcommittee each maintains intimate surveillance on espionage and counter-espionage activities.

But a deeper consideration is involved. Sen. Fulbright, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, has raised the question that the people in CIA "greatly influence foreign policy." In debate on the Senate floor on May 16, Sen. Richard B. Russell (D Ga.), chairman of the Senate subcommittee on CIA, said that "it is sheer poppycock that the CIA is making its own foreign policy."

There is, of course, a vital shade of difference between the thrust and the parry -- the difference between "influencing" and "making" U. S. foreign policy. The Fulbright proposal, which he calls "modest," probably is doomed to failure. Too much publicity about national security is to be avoided. But perhaps a Senate debate about the $4 billion intelligence complex for which senators and representatives appropriate the money but know little about would be healthy.

THE VALUE of the seminars in part stems from the outside moderators brought in from various fields of expertise, in part from the work of a most professional staff, in part from the real and essential contributions of the seminarists themselves.

At a recent session, of which Malcolm F. Mallette, A.P.I. associate director and former managing editor of the Winston-Salem Journal, was the staff representative, the outsiders included, in addition to newspaper people, Dr. Zbigniew W. Brezezinski, director of the Research Institute on Communist Affairs, Columbia University; Prof. John Stoessinger of Hunter College; Dr. John H. Fischer, president of Columbia University Teachers College; Irving J. Rubin, Detroit Regional Transportation and Land Use Study; David A. Crane, associate professor of Civic Design, University of Pennsylvania; Whitney M. Young, Jr., executive director, National Urban League; and William F. Haddad, adviser to Mayor Lindsay of New York and former Inspector General of the federal Office of Economic Opportunity.

The seminars are shirtsleeves as well as off the record, and much of their educative value comes from nonscheduled after-hours discussions. One recent participant reports: "I was impressed mainly by the calibre of my fellow seminarists . . . I felt I was in a gathering of my peers . . . and proud to be there."

When the average person thinks about the American economy, he is inclined to think of "pure competition." Actually pure competition does not exist.

Most industries operate under an oligopoly situation -- that is, where the number of sellers is so small that they have to consider competitor reactions to every action they initiate.

Service stations typically fall into this classification on the local level. Sometimes a certain station's actions may result in a city-wide "gas war." The average firm under oligopoly would not consider raising the price in a price conscious market if competitors were not likely to follow, since his sales would drop greatly.

Although this situation is not composed of what the typical citizen may think of as "pure competition," it is not necessarily a bad situation.

In conditions of this type it is necessary that the firms advertise, especially if productions are different, such as "octane-blended" and "super premium."

Oligopoly may not immediately lead to the lowest price by producers, but advertising gradually tends to bring prices to the lowest feasible level. Since national producers have to enact aggressive policies in order to operate, the consumer is treated to lower prices and improved products.

Retailers who sell these products meet with the same situation. By direct advertising they increase local sales. Again a savings is effected to the consumer. Local level sales depend greatly on advertising to provide the stimulus for consumer shopping in certain businesses. In any type of market, however, a retailer can improve profits by advertising.

JULY 12 -- TUESDAY

ORANGEMAN'S DAY. Northern Ireland. Protestant Irish celebration.

Colonel E. I. (Mike) Hockaday, Superintendent of the Missouri Highway Patrol, has called upon everyone to do his part in protecting children in traffic.

The Patrol Superintendent pointed out that over 70 pedestrians under 15 years of age were either killed or injured in accidents investigated by the Patrol last year.

"It's up to parents, motorists and the children themselves to combat this condition," declaredColonel Hockaday. "By example and education parents can teach their youngsters good habits of walking in traffic that will help protect them in our busy, motorized world. If you, as a parent, always look both ways before crossing streets and cross only at intersections or other designated crosswalks, your child will grow up with these same safe habits."

The Patrol Superintendent also stated to parents that safety rules should be as inflexible and require the same respect as other rules of conduct.

Colonel Hockaday then reminded motorists of their responsibility in regard to young pedestrians. "Children are a particularly great hazard to the motorist. A clear road ahead may suddenly contain a child retrieving a ball or pursuing his runaway pet. Particularly in residential areas, motorists should slow down and increase their alertness.

"Young boys and girls must also do their part to avoid a traffic mishap," the Colonel continued. "They should follow the instructions offered by their parents and do all they can to safeguard themselves in traffic."

Colonel Hockaday concluded by reminding both motorists and children to be extra careful during this time of the year. He said, "There will be many motorists and children on and around the roadways the next few warm months. I urge everyone to respect the rights of one another and do everything possible to prevent a traffic accident."

EVERYBODY'S HAPPY

This is a model story from Holland:

A merchant went to a farmer near Amsterdam to get a pound of butter. The farmer insisted on swapping the butter for a pair of woolen socks. The merchant went home and reported to his wife.

"We have a woolen bedspread," she said. "I'll unravel it and knit a pair of socks." So she proceeded to make the pair of socks and the merchant exchanged them for a pound of butter.

When the merchant needed more butter, his wife would unravel more of the bedspread to be exchanged for the butter. Finally, one day she had enough wool left for only one sock.

The merchant took it to the farmer and asked for a half pound of butter for it.

"No, I'll give you a full pound, said the farmer. "You see, I really don't wear the socks. My wife unravels the wool and uses it for knitting a bedspread, and there's just enough in this sock to finish it."

NO UKASE IS NEEDED

During the last session of Congress, there was a good deal of discussion over proposed measures that, allegedly, are needed in the name of "consumer protection". And during the coming session this matter promises to be a prominent one.

The proposed "protections", in almost every instance, consist of giving a federal bureaucracy sweeping powers over the goods from which the consumer may pick and choose. They involve labeling and the size and kind of packages. The whole idea is to impose a dull and sterile uniformity on a long list of consumer wares, including foods.

No one objects to laws which demand honest statements of weights and measures and what is inside the package. These laws are in effect everywhere, and if in some instances they need to be strengthened that certainly can be done without lessening competition and arbitrarily restricting the consumers' freedom of choice. There is no conceivable need, for instance, for a ukase from Big Brother which will tell a producer what kind of a package he may use in an effort to stimulate sales, and what a retailer can offer.

These proposals, it seems, are predicated on the idea that consumers are generally incompetent and just aren't able to look out for their own interests. Actually, as just about any storekeeper can tell you, the situation is utterly different. The housewife is a wily shopper. She compares, judges and selects. If she ever feels she has been deluded or exploited, she is through with that particular brand of merchandise -- and, possibly, with the store which sold it. She is her own best policeman.

LET'S END IT WITH THIS

It is no small thing that affects the daily lives of eight million people.

Yet eight million, to use a conservative figure, is only about 1/25th of the whole population and it would be understandable if many Americans were to look upon the New York transportation strike as a local affair.

Reaction to it might well be similar to reading a newspaper account of a famine in far-off India: One shudders, gives silent thanks that he is not involved, then turns to another page.

"My Compliments to the Chef!"

But what we witnessed is not merely another demonstration of the much put-upon New Yorker's amazing ability to cope with chronic inconveniences and periodic crises.

What took place has a national significance. It was a showdown between the right of workingmen to strike for improved conditions and the right of the state to forbid public employes to do so as jeopardizing the public weal.

It was an assault on civil authority and on the law itself, symbolized by union leader Michael Quill's tearing up of court orders on television, an act of phony martyrdom which put him in the same class as draft card-burners and others who place themselves above the law.

It was an appalling display of civic irresponsibility and contemptuous disregard for the welfare of the majority and as such marks a black day in the history of the labor movement, a negation of decades of maturing labor-management relations.

The strikers will, most likely, receive their increased benefits retroactively, after they finally agreed to arbitration and the strike ended. But who will retroactively compensate the city and its millions of citizens?

Who will pay them for their lost business, lost wages, lost appointments, worn-out shoes and tattered nerves?

No one possibly could, of course. But hard cash -- lots of it, in the form of severe punitive fines such as were leveled against John L. Lewis and his United Mine Workers back in 1947 -- will go far toward insuring that this strike is recorded as the last example of its kind.

THAT SITTING PIGEON

The American motorist has been a sitting pigeon for the road builders. Gasoline taxes have gone up year after year, in state after state, and have reached a level that no other necessity must carry.

The theory has been aired that motorists really don't mind -- that, in fact, they are willing and even eager to pay higher taxes to finance road building programs on just about any scale. But there are signs that this theory is without basis -- and that the overtaxed motorist is beginning to kick up his heels in protest.

Wisconsin provides a concrete example of that. On April 7th an advisory referendum was held there. It called for an expression of voter sentiment on a proposal to increase the state gasoline tax. Close to one million votes were cast. And the proposal was slaughtered by a six to one margin.

This has been hailed, with full accuracy, as "an encouraging victory for motorists everywhere." And it is the kind of victory that is needed in all the other states -- and in the federal government, which levies a 4 cent tax on every gallon of gas you buy.

H. L. Hunt Says

FOR FREEDOM TOURS

June 22, Mrs. Hunt and I took three daughters, June 1, Helen 17, and Swanee 16, Miss Hanora O'Sullivan of New York and three other girls to Beverly Hills, California.

These youngsters comprised a team known as FREEDOM TEEN TOURS, each to make 3 1/4 minute freedom talks as best they could, of a factual and patriotic nature.

They were not critical of present day youth who join demonstrations against patriots and anyone otherwise dedicated to love of country. They did give positive testimony in behalf of our greatest nation and the freedom guaranteed only in the light of liberty.

These girls were aware that to develop eloquence and fully employ pathos to instill deep emotion, they will need to practice for many hours, just as they have practiced the songs they have sung for years.

On this first trip, they depended on emphasis and voice inflection; but in the short time, none of them developed the ability to induce joyous laughter and a minute later a shedding of a few tears.

In L.A. the most expert in the entertainment and publicity fields said the performance of the girls was definitely "a show," and their fresh, amateurish delivery made their message more appealing.

Upon their return from California, six of them began accepting invitations to speak at service club luncheons, breakfasts, at prayer meetings and small gatherings, where they have been warmly received and commended.

Others enlisted, two girls and a boy spoke at the Fourth of July Celebration featuring dancers and band from Minot, North Dakota, attending the National Convention of Elks. HLH

Battle to Influence LBJ on Red China Looms Between Reuther Brothers and Meany

WASHINGTON, D. C. -- East is East and West is West, but the twain does meet in the East-West Center, an intriguing government operation on the campus of the University of Hawaii in balmy Honolulu.

And soon that peaceful campus will be the site of battle between the forces of George Meany and the legions of the brothers Reuther -- Walter and Victor.

There have been early maneuverings in this new clash which has not yet made the national headlines.

But before this round is over next fall, the struggle between the blunt and inflexible anti-Communist AFL-CIO president George Meany, and the pro-coexistence Reuther brothers will involve the Central Intelligence Agency, the White House, the State Dept. and most of the nation's labor chiefs.

There will be insults and counter-charges -- but the basic issue is whether any sector of American labor should call for recognition of Communist China.

Meany is unmovably opposed to such dealings. The Reuthers are for it and for friendlier dealings with Soviet and Chinese bloc labor men.

Basically the infighting is to outflank the opposition and influence President Johnson-who is opposed to such recognition and has said so to Meany.

But the President's advisers are split.

Thus the stakes are global. And every little maneuver has a meaning of its own. Therefore the latest move of the Reuthers brings us back to the East-West Center in Honolulu.

From September 5 to 9, the Center (which operates somewhat as an international university) will hold an Asiatic Industrial Labor Relations Conference. The program has been set under the title: Labor's Role in National Development. The guests have been invited.

Naturally they come from the broad sweep of that part of the world covered by the East-West Center -- Asia and Pacific rim nations, including the U.S.

This operation, it must be noted, is no ordinary conference.

The East-West Center is not actually part of the educational structure of the University of Hawaii.

East-West Center is a State Dept. project. It is under the Dept.'s Cultural Affairs section.

Funds for this Asian and Pacific studies group come from the general appropriation of the State Dept. The monies are voted by Congress -- which specifically earmarks the dollars.

When the House Appropriations Committee gets a little sticky about the allotment, Meany and his ubiquitously effective Washington lobbyist, Andy Biemiller, turn on a little labor pressure and the East-West chancellor breathes easier about his exchequer for the year.

Imagine, then, the spontaneous combustion inside the national AFL-CIO headquarters when the Asian labor relations conference program arrived all neatly printed.

Organizers of the conference, subsidized by some virtually anonymous foundation, invited no national AFL-CIO participant, though the U. S. labor federation is the free world's largest.

Instead, Victor Reuther, who has accused Meany and the AFL-CIO's International Affairs Dept. of being CIA fronts, was listed as the American labor participant. The young Reuther is the auto union's foreign affairs director.

Also on the schedule is a powerful Japanese labor official, Kaoru Ota, who has received the Lenin Peace Prize.

Obviously someone in the State Dept. had ignored the inflexibly anti-Soviet and anti-Peking national AFL-CIO headquarters. The face of American labor in the parley would be that of Victor Reuther.

The AFL-CIO burned up the wires. It shot off a letter of protest.

It is communicating with all delegates whom it considers friendly to its own policy. It will not participate.

The conference is important because it will influence important Asiatic and Australian labor leaders.

And today's labor leader often is tomorrow's prime minister.

But not the least element of this story is the fact that the State Dept., or a vital section thereof, turned to the Reuthers, and not the Meany forces, for advice.

Obviously the challenge has been hurled at Meany. He is not one at whom to hurl things -- without first duck!

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON -- Ever since members of Sen. Dodd's staff copied his files, there has been national comment as to whether they were right in so doing.

U. S. Judge Alexander Holtzoff stated they were under obligation to report wrongdoing by the senator to the justice department but not to Jack Anderson and me.

In New York this week, a secret hearing is taking place under the auspices of former New York State Court of Appeals Judge Bruce Bromley, now retired, which illustrates the difficulties faced by the press and even the justice department in prosecuting high officials, especially when the official is connected with a senator or a potent congressman.

The secret hearing pertains to ex-Judge Vincent Keogh of the New York Supreme Court, who was convicted of taking a $30,000 bribe in a jukebox case involving Antonio (Tony Ducks) Corallo.

Though Judge Keogh was tried before one of the most respected of federal judges, District Judge Edward Weinfield, and found guilty by a jury in a verdict which was not reversed in the upper courts, nevertheless Keogh has now asked for a hearing on disbarment, and in this hearing the bribery case is virtually being tried all over again.

Judge Keogh is alleging that William Hundley, the respected justice department attorney who tried his case, withheld facts and acted unfairly. Hundley was an Eisenhower appointee, has remained on under the Democrats, is completely non-partisan, leaned over backward to prosecute the case fairly.

Significantly, the rehearing of the Judge Keogh case is held behind closed doors. The public and press are not permitted to be present.

Vincent Keogh is the brother of dapper Gene Keogh, the able congressman from Brooklyn, who is one of the most powerful Democrats in New York.

Note -- The bribery case against Judge Keogh was brought only after there was a certain amount of publicity in the press which focused attention on one of the worst scandals in judicial history since the conviction of Judge Martin Manton.

DODD'S DOCUMENTS

Michael V. O'Hare, former member of Sen. Dodd's staff, has made an interesting and forthright statement to Time Magazine as to why he helped remove documents from Dodd's office. It had been reported that O'Hare was motivated by revenge because his friend, Miss Terry Golden, had been fired by Dodd.

"In my testimony before the Committee on Standards and Ethics," O'Hare explained, "I VOLUNTEERED that I took the bulk of the documents with which I was particularly concerned on the weekend that Miss Golden was dismissed. Your article infers a possible motive of bitterness or revenge over her dismissal. Nothing could be further from the truth. Under ordinary circumstances he would have welcomed Miss Golden's departure from the office at this time. It was the equivalent of being exiled from Rome the day before I burned."

O'Hare then summarized the reason why he took this unusual step.

"We belived we were witness to grave misconduct in office," said O'Hare. "I played an extremely delicate role on the senator's staff for over six months, because I believed that this disclosure of Sen. Dodd's activities was in the public interest."

INSIDE THE WHITE HOUSE

President Johnson was holding a staff conference regarding the political problems of Viet Nam. He complained that he had tried suggestions put forward by almost everyone.

He had talked to Ambassador Lodge, he said, about the problems of Viet Nam, but Lodge's ideas hadn't achieved results. He said he had talked to Sen. Fulbright of Arkansas, the critic of his Viet Nam policy, but Fulbright's ideas hadn't worked.

"I put Lansdale over there," continued the President, "but nothing happened."

His voice sounded especially critical. At this point the President leaned back in his chair as he frequently does. Just behind him, and near enough so he could have bopped him on the head, sat General Landsdale.

Lansdale said nothing. He is the man who performed wonders in the Philippines in the way of village reform and was sent to Viet Nam to stabilize and built up its villages. There, however, he has not been successful.

One reason is that he can't get the same cooperation of top officials in South Viet Nam that he got in the Philippines. In the latter country Lansdale worked directly with President Magsaysay to cut red tape, got things moving. In South Viet Nam, Lansdale has to work through Ambassador Lodge, who doesn't like anyone going over his head to talk to top Vietnamese officials.

NEW YORK (AP) — Things a columnist might never know if he didn't open his mail:

Marriage expectancy is rising along with life expectancy. Average newlyweds today can look forward to living together 43 years — unless, of course, they try divorce.

Your skull is stronger and tougher than you think. It can stand weight of up to 3,600 pounds without being crushed.

Here's a wry footnote on togetherness: About 700 children in the United States commit murder each year —and in two-thirds of the cases the victim is a member of their own family.

Our changing ways: Only 50 years ago liver was regarded by many people as unfit for human consumption and it was fed chiefly to pets. Butchers often gave it away; now it is one of the most expensive of meats.

It has been found that mosquitoes are more likely to bite sick than healthy persons. Maybe it's because they figure that a guy with tired blood is also too tired to swat them.

Prosperity note: Four out of every five U.S. families now own at least one automobile. And one in five families owns two or more cars.

Quotable notables: "Never think that war, no matter how necessary, nor how justified, is not a crime. Ask the infantry and ask the dead." — Ernest Hemingway.

No civilized man wore pants until after the fall of the Roman Empire. Barbarians wrapped skins around their legs to keep out the cold. Roman civilians wore long robes, Roman soldiers short skirts to give them freedom of action. But by the year 600 most European men were clad in trousers.

It costs roughly $2,300 a year to keep an inmate in federal prison, just about the same amount it would take to send him to a good state university.

Musical tribute: More songs have probably been written about President Franklin D. Roosevelt than any other 20th century figure —over 100.

In normal conversation you speak about 125 words a minute. However, the mind can take in and understand from 400 to 700 words a minute — which fortunately, is about as fast as anyone can gossip anyway.

It was Adolf Hitler who observed, "The very first essential for success is a perpetually constant and regular employment of violence."

The gift table was covered with an imported white appliqued organdy tablecloth and held an umbrella made of row on row of tiny ruffles made of white net and decorated with blue bows and blue flowers and a candlelabra holding long blue tapers.

Guests were served individual cakes iced in white bearing "Judy and Jeff" written in blue, mints, salted nuts and coffee or punch from a beautifully appointed table with silver coffee service at one end and a crystal punch bowl at the other.

A floral arrangement completed the table decoration. The honoree, her mother, Mrs. Homer Spradling, and the groom's mother, Mrs. Ewart Taylor, were presented with corsages of white carnations with blue bows by the hostesses.

Miss Donna Kathryn Conrad Is Wed to David Mikal Allen

SEDGEWICKVILLE -- The Whitewater Presbyterian church near here was the setting for the marriage, June 25, of Miss Donna Kathryn Conrad and David Mikal Allen, Patton.

The Rev. Stanley B. Hopper, assisted by the Rev. Clarence Liang, conducted the double ring service. Mrs. R. O. Laird, Jackson, was organist and Mrs. Wayne Johnson, Patton, and Peter R. Conrad, Jonesburg, were soloists.

The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David D. Conrad, Sedgewickville, and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Allen, Patton.

Entering with her father who gave her in marriage, the bride appeared in a gown of white peau de soie and Chantilly lace. Fashioned by her mother, the gown featured a fitted bodice, long-tapered sleeves which ended in points at the wrists and lace appliques at the neckline. Her skirt was semi-fitted, falling from soft pleats at the waistline, and it featured a panel of lace overlaid at the front and a chapel train of matching lace at back.

Her fingertip veil of illusion fell from a crown of pearls and rhinestones worn in her hair. Her bouquet was of carnations centered by an orchid and carried over a white Bible. She wore a strand of pearls and a gold heirloom bracelet which belonged to her grandmother, Mrs. Julius Conrad.

She walked down the aisle lined with white satin bows and baskets of white hydrangeas and honeysuckle and took her place at the altar, banked with baskets of hydranges and greenery. Lighted candels gleamed in candelabra.

Her attendants were Miss Sue Whaley, Sedgewickville, as maid of honor, a cousin, Miss Mary Bollinger, Jackson, and Miss Deborah Conrad, sister of the bride, as bridesmaids. They wore formal gowns of peau de soie similar to the bride's gown with fitted bodices overlaid with Chantilly lace. Each carried a bouquet of white carnations matching their dresses of apricot and aqua colors.

Martin Allen, Sikeston, was his brother's best man and Roy Allen and Tom Allen, Patton, served their brother as groomsmen. Jerry Boyd and Terry Conrad, brother of the bride, seated the wedding guests.

A reception followed in the church basement where the bride's table was covered with an apricot-colored lace cloth made by the bride's grandmother. Serving were Miss Peggy Whaley, Sedgewickville; Mrs. Robert G. Talley, Cape Girardeau; Mrs. Leland Nelson, Jackson, and Mrs. Harold W. Bollinger, Jackson, cousins of the bride. Mrs. Roy L. Allen of Patton was at the guest book.

After a short wedding trip, Allen returned to Charleston, S. C., where he is stationed with the U. S. Navy. The former Miss Conrad will continue in her position as clerk for the U. S. Department of Agriculture in Marble Hill.

Salt in Oceans

Major efforts are being made to find large-scale economical methods of extracting salt from the sea so that seawater can be used for drinking and other human needs. A gallon of seawater contains about ¼-pound of salt and, it is estimated, there are about 4.5 million cubic miles of salt in all the earth's oceans combined.

Miss Jackson Is Honored At Shower

Miss Janice Jackson was honored with a miscellaneous bridal shower Friday evening in the fellowship hall of the First Assembly of God church. Miss Jackson is the bride-elect of Charles Cox of East Prairie.

Co-hostesses were Mrs. G. H. Jones, Mrs. Bob Ballard, Mrs. J. W. Godwin, and Mrs. Raymond Page.

The color scheme of yellow and leaf green that Miss Jackson has chosen for her wedding was used at the refreshment and gift gable. The refreshment table was covered with a floor-length white cloth and adorned at each corner with yellow bows and wedding bells. The table was centered with a wicker basket full of artificial vegetables which was later presented to the honoree as a gift from the hostesses. Yellow tapers in silver holders flanked the punch bowl.

In the decorations of the gift table, the focal point of interest was a large arch entwined with greenery and yellow morning glory flowers and love birds. Two wedding bells and a miniature bride and groom stood beneath the arch. Above the table, wedding bells were suspended from the ceiling among a shower of streamers of yellow and green.

During the evening, the game "Bride" was played for which prizes were awarded. The winners, in turn, presented the prize to the honoree. Also, the invited guests brought along their favorite recipe and gave to the bride-to-be.

The honoree was presented her gifts which she displayed and refreshments of bell shaped yellow iced cookies and lemonade were served.

NL Favored To Win 19th All-Star Game

ST. LOUIS, Mo. AP -- Righthander Dennis McLain of Detroit and southpaw Sandy Koufax of Los Angeles were named today the starting pitchers for Tuesday's All-Star game.

The embarrassed American League, winner of only one of the last nine All-Star baseball games, is ready to go all out Tuesday against the favored National League's impressive array.

The National Leaguers have been taking blows for winning both the World Series and the All-Star Game in each of the last three years. Overcoming a 12-4 edge in the All-Star series once completely dominated by the American League, Willie Mays and Co. have taken the lead 18-17-1.

Sam Mele, the Minnesota skipper who will boss the American League, sounded the word before he left home.

"I'll use my eight starters all the way if it will help us win," said Mele. "I'm going to win this one. We'll play to win."

Walter Alston of the Los Angeles Dodgers can be counted upon to give his sluggers a similar message.

In the old days it was common for most of the pitchers to work the Sunday previous to the game. That no longer is the case.

Five of the 16 pitchers were used Sunday but the only starters were Steve Barber of Baltimore on the American side and Jim Bunning of Philadelphia on the National side. Pete Richert of Washington, Claude Raymond of Houston and Phil Regan of the Los Angeles Dodgers were used in relief.

Regan was a late addition to the staff. He was named by Alston to take the place of Bob Gibson when the St. Louis Cardinal ace came up with a sore elbow. Sam McDowell of Cleveland, who lasted less than an inning Sunday, also bowed out with a sore arm and was replaced by teammate Sonny Siebert.

Sandy Koufax of the Dodgers, the majors' top winner with a 15-4 record, worked Saturday. So did Gaylord Perry of San Francisco and Billy McCool of Cincinnati. Juan Marichal of San Francisco has rested since pitching a three-hitter for his 14th victory Friday. Bob Veale of Pittsburgh has not pitched since Thursday.

Three American League starters worked Saturday - Gary Bell of Cleveland, Catfish Hunter of Kansas City and Denny McLain of Detroit, the league's big winner with a 13-4 record. Jim Kaat of Minnesota and Mel Stottlemyre of New York were used Friday.

Both manager were scheduled to name their pitchers and batting orders at a morning news conference.

Alston, who had been undecided about coming to the game due to the illness of his mother, is expected to be on hand. If he cannot make it, Herman Franks of the league-leading San Francisco Giants will take his place.

All-Stars--Injuries struck the National League starting lineup forcing Alston to replace second baseman Joe Morgan of Houston with switch-hitting Jim Lefebvre of his Dodger club. Morgan suffered a broken knee cap a week ago.

Ron Santo, the Chicago Cubs, third baseman, retained his starting job, wearing a special face guard to protect his injured cheekbone.

The Nationals have the majors' top home run hitter in Hank Aaron of the Atlanta Braves in the outfield along with marvelous Willie Mays of the San Francisco Giants and Roberto Clemente of Pittsburgh.

Willie McCovey of San Francisco at first base, Lefebvre at second, Leo Cardenas of Cincinnati at short, Santo at third and Joe Torre of Atlanta as catcher completed the power-packed starting line-up.

Frank Robinson of Baltimore, anxious to show the Nationals that Cincinnati made a mistake in trading him, will team with Detroit's Al Kaline and Minnesota's Tony Oliva in the American outfield.

Rookie George Scott of Boston at first base, Bobby Knoop of California at second, Dick McAuliffe of Detroit at short, Brooks Robinson of Baltimore at third and Bill Freehan of Detroit as catcher are the other starters.

Brooks Robinson's 70 runs batted in top the majors and Frank Robinson and Kaline are tied for the league home run lead with 21.

All starters, except pitchers, must play at least three innings. No pitcher can go more than three, unless the games goes into extra inning.

The game will be carried on national NBC television starting at 2 p.m., EDT.

Players are straggling in from all points on makeshift schedules due to the airplane strike. Special planes are ready if unexpected emergencies develop.

St. Louis expects a capacity crowd of close to 50,000 in new Busch Memorial Stadium and the weather man promises to make it hot.

A's Take Two, Cards Drop One

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Kansas City barged into sixth place in the American League Sunday, taking both ends of a double header from Cleveland, 4-1 and 5-3.

St. Louis remained in sixth place in the National League although Atlanta picked up a game on the Cards as Houston edged their hosts in Busch Memorial Stadium, 6-5, behind Rusty Staub's two home runs.

The A's took the lead early in both games, scoring four times in the opening frame of the first game and three times in the first game and three times in the first inning of the second.

With two out, Mike Hershberger walked, stole second and scored on a double by Ed Charles. Dick Green followed with a single to score Charles and Joe Nossek slammed an inside the park homer.

Rookie Jim Nash, given the benefit of this cushion, proceeded to set the Indians down on three hits, one of which by Max Alvis, was ruled an inside the park homer in the fifth.

In the second game, the A's collected four hits, including a double by Roger Repoz, for their three runs in the first inning.

The Indians picked up single runs in the third, fourth and fifth innings to tie it before the A's surged ahead again in the sixth on another double by Repoz and Larry Stahl's line single to left.

Kansas City added an insurance run in the seventh when Campy Campaneris beat out a hit to short, stole second and scored on a surprise double by winning pitcher Jack Aker.

Bill Stafford started the second game but gave way to Wes Stock and Jim Duckworth. Aker took over to begin the seventh and earned the victory with three strong innings in which he allowed three hits, struck out two and walked no one.

The Cards took a short live 3-2 lead in the fifth, only to have Houston knot the count in the sixth, moved ahead again in the seventh, 5-3, then yielded as Staub hit his second home run of the game, a two - run shot in the eighth.

Bob Aspromonte scored the winning run on a single, a bobble, and Bob Lillis' single.

St. Louis loaded the bases with none out in the eighth, but Mike Cuellar came on in relief to retire the side without any damage.

Orlando Cepeda and Dal Maxvill had four hits apiece for the Cards. Cepeda's production included his 11th homer of the season.

Both teams will be idle until after the All - Star game Tuesday in St. Louis.

YOU KNOW WHEN A CAR IS AIR CONDITIONED BY A.R.A.

Get into a closed car that has been parked in the sun on a hot day. If there is an A.R.A. unit under the dash or in the trunk, cool air begins filling the interior as soon as you turn the unit on. INSTANT COOLING is only one of the advantages you can count on with an A.R.A. unit. QUIET, TROUBLE-FREE OPERATION is another. For a car full of cool air, and cooling performance you can depend on when you need it — you can't do better than an A.R.A.

New Madrid County Library Gets New Books

PORTAGEVILLE -- New books at the New Madrid County Library include "The Ninety and Nine" by William Brinkley, a dramatic and humorous novel about the crew of an LST on the run from Naples to Anzio beachhead, by the author of "Don't Go Near the Water." Its two love stories built into a shattering climax.

"Make Room! Make Room!" by Harry Harrison is a science fiction novel set in New York City in the year 1999, when the water shortage is so critical that each person is allowed one quart a day and -- not only do the subways not run -- there are none.

"Surgeon, U. S. A." by Frank G. Slaughter is the story of a dedicated surgeon who gave up a brilliant career to serve in the Army during World War II. Under pressure from politicians and protocol, he manages to remain true to his own hunches and to his Hippocratic oath.

"Khrushchev" -- Illustrated with photographs, by Edward Crankshaw, tells of the career of the wily, self-made man who rose from peasant origins to be a determining force in world affairs and parallels the whole history of post-revolutionary Russia.

Copeland Named to Mental Health

Representative Fred E. Copeland, popular young legislator from southeast Missouri has joined the Board of Directors of the Missouri Association for Mental Health. In addition to acting in an advisory capacity on Legislative matters, Rep. Copeland will act as a member of the Planning Committee, Finance Committee and Membership Committee.

The Nominating Committee of the Missouri Association for Mental Health Board unanimously recommended Mr. Copeland because of his long and avid interest in the welfare of the mentally ill and mentally retarded. Gordon E. Weiss, Executive Director of M. A. M. H. stated that Mr. Copeland's voting record on mental health measures was more than enough to qualify him for a position of leadership in the 100,000 member organization. Mr. Weiss went on to state; "Gene Copeland, on countless occasions has given freely of his time in guiding and directing us in our legislative efforts; his door has always been open to us when we needed his advice and counsel. His presence on the board will lend great strength to our program and will be of great benefit to the mentally ill and mentally retarded in our state."

The Missouri Association for Mental Health was recently named by Governor Hearnes as the authority in Missouri for implementation of the states' comprehensive mental health planning. It is the first voluntary organization of its kind to be so named in the United States. It numbers 100,000 members across the state and is presently growing at an unprecedented rate. The Nominating Committee, in naming Rep. Copeland, noted that southeast Missouri has furnished many outstanding leaders in the mental health effort.

Old Public Service

The delivery of letters is one of the oldest public services. Darius the Great, in 500 B.C., operated a postal system throughout Persia. Our word post is derived from the Latin positus, which means "placed," because horses were stationed at intervals for riders to relay Roman dispatches.

Farmers Eligible to Plant Alternate Crops

BENTON -- Farmers who signed up this year to participate in the cotton, wheat or feed grain programs but who have not been able to plant the crop because of natural disaster are urged to get in touch with the ASCS county office as soon as possible.

Roy Proctor, chairman of Scott county Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Committee, said newly enacted legislation now permits such farmers to obtain program benefits and to plant alternate crops on acreage intended earlier to be planted to one of the three crops. County ASC committees will make prompt arrangements to provide program benefits to farmers who have signed up as participants.

The chairman explained that if the county committee determined that an acreage of cotton, wheat or feed grains was not planted this spring because of flood, drought or other natural disaster, they can consider it as having been planted for the purpose of program eligibility and payments, provided a production-adjustment crop was not subsequently planted there for harvest in the current year. Production-adjustment crops include wheat, feed grains, tobacco, cotton, peanuts, rice, sugar beets, and sugar cane for harvest.

Farm program participants whose crops are lost after planting already had the opportunity to plant alternative crops on such acreage and still qualify for program benefits. Thus, farmers who signed up in the wheat, feed grain or cotton program and planted crops which later were destroyed by natural disaster may plant an alternative crop on the affected acreage and receive the available price-support payments as if the crop had been harvested.

Both provisions are effective for the same crop years -- 1966 through 1969.

THIS HOUSE, built in 1853, is going to be restored. It is one of the older houses in Scott County.

To Restore Old House

One of the older houses in Scott County is going to be restored. Mrs. James Handy Moore of Charleston said Friday.

The house, located near Tanner, was built in 1853 by Ben F. Hunter. In its construction, the lumber used was cut by a method known as whip-sawing, and in place of nails, wooden pegs were used.

The house is about 11/2 stories high and about 50 feet long. It has two rooms on the first floor, each room 20 by 20 feet, with a 10-foot breezeway between the rooms. A stairway leads from the breezeway to the upstairs rooms.

The house, when occupied, was heated by large fireplaces at each end of the house. The roof is cypress boards.

The old house was moved from its original site yesterday to a site nearer Route ZZ. Mrs. Moore said a new house would be erected on the original site of the Hunter home. Her husband's grandmother was born in the old house.

Medicare Passes First Week Much Smoother Than Expected

EDITOR'S NOTE -- Members of The Associated Press task force, who reported on the initial impact of medicare when it went into effect July 1, have kept a watch on hospitals in major cities during the program's first week. This is their report.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

After the first week of medicare, the nation's hospitals generally report they have much more paperwork but not many more patients.

A survey in 12 maor cities indicates that the number of 65-and-over patients entering hospitals has been mostly normal since the program of hospital insurance under Social Security went into effect July 1. Only Atlanta, with a 10 per cent gain, reported a significant increase.

"After all it's still the doctor who says when a patient should be admitted to a hospital," said Dr. Robert M. Hazen of Kansas City, advancing one reason for medicare's calm start.

Others given by hospital administrators included the availability of private medical insurance and other public health care, and the fact that medicare went into effect in summer, a normally slow time for hospitals.

In New York, said Dr. S. David Pomrinse, assistant director of Mt. Sinai Hospital, the city "has long made it a practice to give medical care to all people. The payoff is that we don't have any greater demand now than before."

The hospital's director of admissions, Nat Louis, said: "The urgency, the scare has passed. Anything that comes now is simply a matter of procedure and that can be worked out. Our only impact here is paper."

That was the major impact also at Jackson Memorial Hospital in Miami, where head clerk Barbara Maton said her dozen helpers are "up to here in forms, perforated tape and problems."

Some hospital people warned that the future course of medicare may not run as smoothly as the past week.

John Brewer, chairman of the Southern California Council of Hospitals, pointed out that in Los Angeles fall is a more popular time than summer for elective surgery.

"This is going to be a gradual thing, not a sudden one," he predicted, reporting that only cataract operations have increased in his area since July 1.

The real impact of medicare lies in the future, said Sister Mary James, administrator of Hotel Dieu House of God, a New Orleans hospital.

"I have been told that the people now over 65 are people who always have avoided doctors or hospitals whenever possible and that the real medicare load will come when younger people reach the age of 65," she said. "I think there is some truth in this."

Those among the nation's 19 million persons 65 and over who have taken advantage of medicare so far had high priase for the program.

"If I didn't have it, I wouldn't be here," said Valentine Kuffel, 79, from his bed in St. Elizabeth's Hospital in Chicago. He was admitted July 4 for surgery.

"Of course I'm happy," said Vincent Locasio, 75 a retired carpenter, at Research Medical Center in Kansas City. "Why shouldn't I be? A lot of people have nothing to go on. This was necessary."

Not all patients admitted under medicare cannot afford private care. At Miami's Jackson Memorial Hospital, Raymond S. Perrine, 66, a former Pennsylvania coal magnate, was admitted after he got back from a world cruise last month. He found trouble developing with his Pacemaker, an instrument that keeps his heart beating.

"I thought if I could go a few more days, I could get in under medicare," said Perrine, who now lives in Bradenton, Fla. "so I negotiated with the doctor and was admitted July 2 and operated on July 3.

Perrine was happy to discover that medicare covered the cost of the Pacemaker, a delicate electronic battery inserted in a patient's body. He had deposited $500 to cover its cost but was told he would get the money back.

"I'm glad to hear it," he said. "I don't ever disregard the value of a dollar."

Bootheel To Be Warmer

Bootheel residents can look forward to warmer than normal July temperatures and near normal rainfall this month. This will call for some irrigation, much air conditioning, and frequent trips to nearby water resorts.

Low pressure centers are not generally active in the mid-south in this summer month. Except for years when tropical storms change the pattern, moisture spreading northward from the Gulf of Mexico is acted upon by mid-summer heat to stir up scattered thundershower activity. An increase in such activity along the Gulf Coast region is expected to produce heavy rains from Texas to the Carolinas and Florida. Enough moisture will penetrate into Arkansas and Southeast Missouri to provide near normal rainfall for July 1966.

Normal July precipitation for the Bootheel as a whole is 3.22 inches. Normals for individual cities are:

Caruthersville 3.56 inches; Fisk 3.29 inches; New Madrid 3.79 inches; Poplar Bluff 3.33 inches; Dexter 3.22 inches; Morehouse 2.86 inches; Parma 3.45 inches; Sikeston 3.12 inches.

Short term averages for other Bootheel locations:

Charleston 3.26 inches; Malden 3.52 inches; Portageville 3.14 inches; Kennett 3.18 inches.

These amounts of rain fall far short of crop demand in normal years. Where moisture is available, plants will generally use over three inches more water than is provided by showers. Following a dry June in which some sub-soil moisture reserves were used, this will mean moisture stresses for corn and cotton, particularly on sandy soils. June rainfall for Bootheel Weather Bureau stations was:

Cairo 2.94 inches; Charleston 2.15 inches; Malden 1.98 inches; Caruthersville 0.92 inches; Sikeston 4.43 Inches; Poplar Bluff 1.55 inches; Kennett 2.78 inches; Portageville 1.40 inches.

Early reports from our Bootheel raingage network showed 2.10 inches at M. E. Allens Farm at Puxico, 1.40 inches at the Dolphin Gin, Steele and at the Crews Reynolds Gin at Caruthersville.

Corn is already using large daily amounts of water and has had several irrigations on some farms. Cotton demands will increase now that warm nights have increased growth, particularly as fruiting becomes heavy later in the month. Usually we can expect rain on 9 to 11 days of the month, and amounts will vary considerably in thundershowers. Daily and five day weather outlooks will be particularly useful in scheduling harvest of hay, peaches and watermelons since they point out expected intervals between wet periods.

Daytime temperatures will rise into the 90s on most days of the month. Readings above the 100 degree mark have not been common in recent years. However, with above normal heat in the Bootheel, Kennett had 16 days of 100 degrees or higher in 1954. That included 16 of the first 19 days of a sweltering month. Malden had 12 such days in that year and Portageville 11.

Cattle feed better where shade and water are plentiful during prolonged hot spells. Potato growers will want to watch temperatures during harvest to prevent heat damage to freshly dug tubers. Some farmers discontinue harvest when temperatures rise above 85 degrees.

Mites tend to increase in cotton during hot, dry weather. Humans have hot weather problems too. We can expect to spend more on electrical power to run air conditioners. An increase in water sports calls for reminders to guard against excessive exposure to sun, and to leave the water promptly at the earliest signs of approaching electrical storms. Thunderstorms are also a hazard to the fisherman and the golfer.

THE CITY OF SIKESTON, MO.
Resolution

A resolution declaring the necessity for the construction of 1 1/2" hotmix asphaltic pavement on 6" soil cement base with concrete curb and gutter on Frisco Street from Ruth Street to Dorothy Street extended in accordance with plans & specifications in the City of Sikeston, Missouri; stating the nature of the improvement; the estimated cost and providing that payment for all of the improvement shall be made by special tax bills levied and assessed against the abutting property. Be it resolved by the Council of the City of Sikeston, State of Missouri, as follows: SECTION 1: That the Council of the City of Sikeston, Missouri, deems and declares the construction of said Street necessary to the welfare and improvement of the City of Sikeston. SECTION 2: That the nature and scope of the improvement shall consist of furnishing all cost, including labor, materials and transportation necessary for the complete construction of the improvement. SECTION 3: That the estimated cost of the improvement is $4.50 per lineal foot of abutting property, to be charged against the lots and tracts of land abutting the improvement. SECTION 4: That payment for all of the improvement shall be made by special tax bills evidencing special assessments against the abutting property in the manner specified by the statutes of the State of Missouri and the ordinances of the City of Sikeston, Missouri, because in the opinion of the City Council the General Revenue fund of the City of Sikeston is not in a condition to warrant an expenditure therefrom to pay for the improvement. SECTION 5: That any work performed on construction of the improvement shall be in compliance with the provisions of the prevailing wage laws of the State of Missouri, such prevailing wage rates having been established by the Industrial Commission of Missouri. SECTION 6: That the City Clerk is hereby authorized and directed to furnish a copy of this Resolution to a daily newspaper of general circulation in the City of Sikeston, so that it shall be published for seven consecutive insertions. Read the first, second and third times and passed and approved this 5th day of July, 1966. Approved: Kendall Sikes, Mayor; Attest: John W. Vaughn, City Clerk. 242 INC. 248

Gunmen Get $10,000 In Independence Holdup

INDEPENDENCE, Mo. AP -- Two gunmen robbed two store employes of an estimated $10,000 Friday at Cascio's Food Mart on U. S. 40.

The employes, Peter J. Donnici, 23, assistant manager, and Jerry Beisly, 17, had just returned from a bank with money for cashing weekend checks.

Donnici said three men in a car stopped behind his car at the rear of the store. Two men got out.

"When I saw the men were wearing stocking caps over their faces I knew it was a holdup," Donnici said.

He and Beisly were forced to walk away while the men grabbed the money and drove off.

The bandits' car was found 30 minutes later. The license had been reported stolen.

Union Electric Plans $140 Million Plant

ST. LOUIS AP -- Union Electric Co. announced plans today for construction of a $140 million steam power plant on the Missouri River near Labadie in Franklin County.

The two-unit plant is expected to begin operation early in 1970.

The company is building a 1,050,000 kilowat unit at Portage des Sioux on the Mississippi River in St. Charles County.

"Every telephone pole we pass reminds me of the little dog I used to take for a walk each evening before he died," said one of the two strollers.

"Trees, too, I suppose?"

"No, no -- not trees. Trees still have their bark."

ANN LANDERS
Answers Your Problems

Dear Ann Landers: I have been married to Lee (made-up name) for nine years. We have four children and a nice home in the suburbs. Lee is a good husband and father and we have a happy marriage.

Tonight, by accident, I ran across some cigaret paper for rolling your own. It was tucked in the back of Lee's desk drawer along with an envelope that had been taped and stapled. I opened the envelope and found some dried particles of what appeared to be a plant. It is dark brown in color and has some tiny seeds mixed in. Can this be marijuana?

I have not told my husband that I found the envelope and I don't know if I should. Please tell me what you know about marijuana and what I ought to do about it.--FRIGHTENED

Dear Frightened: Obviously, I could not attempt to analyze any substance without first seeing it, and in this instance, even if I saw it I wouldn't be of much help. I don't know what marijuana looks like.

If you take the contents of the envelope to an organic chemist for analysis and if it turns out to be marijuana, prepare yourself for questioning by legal authorities. Possession of marijuana is against the law.

It seems inlikely to me that your husband could be on pot and you would not know it. This weed produces exhilaration which you would surely recognize as universal behavior. Discuss the problem with your family doctor and accept his counsel

Dear Ann Landers: Who is right? My husband's sister has two children who are in grammar school. Her son had a tenth birthday several days ago and my husband and I sent the youngster a very nice gift.

Yesterday we received a handwritten letter to "my dear Unkle and Ant" thanking us for the "beautiful presunt." The stationery was folded in a sloppy, haphazard manner and the envelope looked as if he had carried it in his pocket for a week.

I showed the letter to my husband and he said he thought it was "fine" that the kid took the time and trouble to write a thank you letter. I said it was the very least the boy could do. I also said I thought his mother should have looked at the letter before he sent it, and corrected his spelling and instructed him to write it over. Do you agree with me?--OLD WORLD THINKER

Dear Thinker: No, I do not agree with you. The child's note was an expression of appreciation. He thanked you in his own words--in his own way. For a 10-year-old, "Unkle and Ant" isn't too bad. You should see the letters I get from high school kids complaining about "kerfew" and not enough "freedum."

Dear Ann Landers: I am a 15-year-old girl who is heartbroken. I went with Bart for six months. I knew the minute I laid eyes on him that he was very mixed up. I was his psychiatrist, his mother figure, his sweetheart and his parole officer. I was also his banker. He still owes me $9.00.

After I gave him everything he wanted he told me that I was too bossy and then he dropped me for another girl. He needs me but he doesn't know it. Please tell me how to get the message across to him. --LINDA

Dear Linda: Never mind about getting the message across to him. Concentrate on the message he got across to you. You need this fellow like Custer needed more Indians. Consider yourself lucky to be rid of the guy.

When necking becomes petting, watch out! To learn how the smart girl keeps both her dignity and her boy friend, send for Ann Landers' booklet, "Necking and Petting--And How Far To Go." enclosing with your request 25¢ in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Our neighbor's six-year-old boy walked into the room where his mother was doing the family washing and picked up a bottle of liquid starch. He looked at the label a long time.

"Hey, mom?" he asked at last. "If I drink this stuff will I get stiff?"

ONE FLAG FOR ALL!

1966 is the 190th Birthday of the Spirit of '76

AN EDITORIAL

1966 looks upon a world filled with maniacal international politicians jockeying for power. The effects reach into every home in the land . . . pressuring emotions with endless strain. The thought occurs to us how tragic it would be if some misguided nation misread the meanings of the marches and counter marches the picketings and counter picketings of small groups of protesters who have big mouths and small support from the rank and file citizenry who make up 95% of our population. There always have been little "exception groups" in America. There is an opposite side to every belief, conviction and ideal in our nation. Yet the Spirit of '76 remains as strong in the hearts of most Americans as it was when it was born 190 years ago.

Differences of opinion among Americans have been underlined by strong public stands of splinter groups since the end of World War II. Throughout these demonstrations the 95% majority who disagreed with each other in many areas were never far apart on the main issue: the unity of our republic is inviolable.

As the important national holidays roll around again for the 190th time, the time comes to show the colors on every home as a testimonial to our national unity and love of country. Every American should join this host of flag flyers. Get a home flag set now. Fly it on your home on Armed Forces Day, Decoration Day, Flag Day, Independence Day, Veterans Day and on Lincoln's and Washington's Birthdays, too . . . and on the fifteen important national holidays on which the flags should fly. Get a flag. Any U.S. Flag. Anywhere. But fly it. Make this a must on your list of things to do. Show the children how to raise it in the morning and take it down at twilight. This is the American way . . . and should be preserved forever as a national tradition.

Today In U. S. History

Today is Monday, July 11, the 192nd day of 1966. There are 173 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1804, two revolutionary war leaders, Aaron Burr and Alexander Hamilton, met in a pistol duel in Weehawken, N.J. Two shots were fired and Hamilton fell, mortally wounded.

On this date

In 1767, our sixth president, John Quincy Adams, was born.

In 1810, Holland was annexed to the Napoleonic empire.

In 1814, a British fleet captured the town of Eastport, Maine.

In 1937, American composer George Gershwin died.

In 1952, General Dwight D. Eisenhower was nominated for president on the first ballot at the Republican National Convention in Chicago.

Ten years ago—The French government approved the plan for Euratom—an atomic energy commission composed of representatives of the six Common Market nations.

Five years ago—A United Air Lines DC8 jetliner careened off the runway at Denver airport, hit a truck and caught fire. Seventeen persons aboard the plane and a man in the truck died.

One year ago — President Johnson issued a report on the effect of the 1964 civil rights act during its first year. He said the letter of the law had been complied with, but added: "The next step is to achieve compliance in spirit."

"SCALDED AND COCKED"

My grandfather served in the Indianan Infantry in the internal struggle to preserve that nation. My brother went over with the 1st division and shortly after I enlisted in the U. S. Navy for four years.

In World War II my oldest sons served in the conflict. My son, after this served in the Korean dual.

My two younger sons served their time in the Air Corps, and the Spanish American Veterans State. We were all volunteers. I hereby wish to state that I was a volunteer in the Sea Bees in World War II and that I was sworn in and never called and I must still be on the rolls. After this introduction I wish to state this fact.

I am past the three score and 10 and I still would like to walk the streets and drive the highways as a free man.

And I wish to state that regardless of his nationality, his place of call or whether he is a teenager, that I will protect myself or any persons that might be with me and I will not ask any questions for I feel that I should be allowed to walk the streets of any town or city in this "Land of the Free."

(ATLANTA) -- JEST FOR TODAY.

ON a transoceanic flight a passenger was carrying on a conversation with the stewardess with the obvious purpose of impressing his fellow passengers with his English.

He asked the stewardess: "How high is this plane?"

She answered, "29,000 feet."

He nodded solemnly, thought for a moment, then called the stewardess again and asked, "How wide is it?"

James Archer Returns From Vietnam

by CAROL MILLER

After completing a year's tour of duty in South Vietnam, Major James H. Archer is home with his family in Sikeston. He is a member of the famous Green Berets, a unit of special volunteer forces which are trained in many areas of military knowledge.

"These special forces were sent to Vietnam in 1961 as advisors to the South Vietnamese. They are responsible for training and equipping the Civilian Irregular Defense Group which is similar to a home guard. Detachments are stationed all over South Vietnam," said Major Archer.

On his last assignment, Major Archer was executive officer for a special (C) detachment which was one of four in Vietnam. It was located at Bien Hoa about 30 miles north of Saigon.

During his 16 years in the service, Major Archer has been stationed at various points within the United States and spent three years in Germany. Since last July when he left for Vietnam his family--wife, Jane, and daughters, Melissa, Susan, Laura, and Jane--has lived in Sikeston.

This was Major Archer's second tour of duty in Vietnam in the special forces which he joined in 1962. During his first tour in 1964, he commanded a 12 man (A) detachment and was slightly wounded. At this time his family was staying at Fort Brad, North Carolina.

On both trips over he made only two stops--one in California and the other at Okinawa.

Major Archer attended language school to learn the Vietnamese language which helped him become acquainted with the people of Vietnam. He stated, "I like the Vietnamese people very much. They are good people." At some later time Major Archer would like to visit Vietnam and his many friends there with his family.

He continued to say that there was no comparison between the culture of the United States and that of the Vietnamese. "Their customs, food, standard of living, and economy are different from ours. They also do not have near the luxuries that the United States does."

One similarity between Sikeston and Vietnam that Major Archer mentioned was the hot, humid climate.

However, he said that it does rain in Vietnam. From May to September the summer monsoons from the Pacific plague the southern delta area with heavy rains; then from September to March the weather shifts and the moonsoons hit the northern part of the country.

At the end of July when his leave is over, Major Archer and his family will report to Fort Leavenworth, Kansas.

Pea Pickin' May Replace Cotton Pickin' in Bootheel

Pea pickers, corn huskers and peachpluckers likely will invade the cotton-pickin' Missouri Delta Area in southeast Missouri as a result of a recent feasibility study.

The study, "The Economic Feasibility of Commercial Fruit and Vegetable Production and Processing in The Missouri Delta," was instigated to determine the economic feasibility of producing fruits and vegetables and the practicality of establishing one or more processing plants in the traditionally cotton-growing areas.

The report wad made by the University of Missouri Agricultural Experiment Station in cooperation with the Economic Research Service, U. S. Department of Agriculture as a result of a request for technical assistance by the Missouri Division of Commerce and Industrial Development.

The Economic Development Administration, U. S. Department of Commerce, provided a substantial share of costs for conducting the study engineered by Prof. Tom Brown, Agricultural Economics, University of Missouri, and James L. Pearson, Economic Research Service, USDA, University of Fla.

The study cites the seven-county Missouri Delta for its abundance of level productive land, unlimited water for irrigation and large, well-financed farm units, all of which provide the needed resources for vegetable production.

The authors point out that production and processing of vegetables are economically feasible.

Cotton acreage has declined 20 percent in the Delta since 1950 and rapid adoption of mechanical cotton pickers has greatly reduced the labor required on remaining cotton acreage; consequently, fewer jobs are available in the area, particularly for seasonal day labor.

Findings indicate that production of vegetable raw materials would increase net and gross farm income of the area by almost $75,000 and $395,000 respectively.

The analysis reveals that seasonal day laborers currently underemployed on farms in the area would be able to work an additional 102,000 hours in the production of vegetable crops. This would, according to the study, increase their income $61,200 annually.

Researchers brought together data from various informational sources relative to the production, processing and marketing of fruits and vegetables. Based on this information, a group of products was selected for further analysis of economic feasibility of production and processing.

In a processing plant analysis, specifications for a freezing plant and canning plant were developed. Buildings, equipment and variable input requirements were obtained in detail. Costs and returns for annual operation of each plant were computed. Resultant profits, after deduction of corporate income taxes, provided the necessary measurements of processing feasibility.

Fruits and vegetables have been grown in the Delta for several years. Production generally has been limited to the fresh market, though some producers have grown products for processors. No fruit and vegetable processing facilities presently are located in the area.

A group of interested farmers and businessmen in southeast Missouri is actively seeking processors interested in the Delta.

The growing number of program participators have enlisted temporary services of the Missouri Delta Development Corporation, Portageville, until a permanent organization of farmers can be established.

The seven counties form a fairly homogeneous economic area in terms of soil, cropping patterns and socio-economic features. Farm land in the area totals 2, 119,000 acres, 83 percent in cropland.

Soils of the area are alluvial, having been formed by the Mississippi, Ohio and St. Francis Rivers. Approximately 50 percent of the soil is fine sandy loam, the other half ranging from light blow sand to heavy gumbo clays. The entire area is underlain with water for irrigation at depths of less than 60 feet.

Field crops accounted for more than $19 million of the products while livestock, and livestock products, including poultry and dairy products, accounted for the remainder.

The census disclosed that 113 farms in Stoddard county sell more than $40,000 each a year, while 348 farms have sales of between $10,000 and $20,000 a year. But 329 farms sell between $2,500 and $5,000 worth of farm products each year.

The county has 2,033 farms which is about 500 fewer farms than reported by the previous five-year Census. The average size of farms in the county was given as 212.5 acres, which is about 50 acres larger than the average size of the farms at the time of the previous five-year census.

The average value of the farmland per acre was reported by the census to be $283 per acre. This was $106 per acre more than the value as reported by the previous Census of Agriculture.

The census discloses that the average value of the farm, including land and buildings, in Stoddard county is $59,042. This is more than twice the value per farm as reported by the previous five-year census, which was $28,439.

Though the average farm was found to contain 212 acres, some were much larger and some smaller. There were 370 farms with acreage from 10 to 40 and 266 farms with an average acreage between 70 and 100 acres. The largest number of farms (327) have between 260 and 500 acres. Thirty-six had between 1,000 and 2,000 acres.

The census disclosed that 850 farms in the county grow mostly grain, and 263 are mainly cotton farms. The number of livestock farms was 244.

The census surveyed more than 1,000 farm owners in the county, and found all were white except five. A survey of part owners, a total of more than 500, showed five of these were Negroes.

Out of more than 1,800 farm operators reported by the census, all except 159 live on the farms they operate, while the 159 live elsewhere.

More than 800 operators were found to have non-farm jobs as well as farm jobs. Of this number about 475 worked more than 100 days a year at the non-farm jobs.

The farmers of the county sell 301,816 dozen eggs a year, and also more than 3 million pounds of whole milk.

Woman Wounded by Police Responding to Treatment

POST FALLS, Idaho AP - Lillian Jo Ramus, the young woman who charged out of a motel room, spraying bullets from a gold-plated M1 carbine at policemen and FBI agents, lay seriously wounded today but was responding to treatment.

One FBI agent was wounded in the shoot-out just before midnight Saturday before the 28-year-old woman fell with bullet wounds in the head and left hip. After emergency surgery at a hospital in Spokane, Wash., 20 miles away, she was taken off the critical list.

"After we told her to come out, she opened and closed the motel door several times, then fired a single shot inside the room, apparently to make us think she had shot herself," said FBI special agent Robert Rockwell of Coeur d'Alene, who was shot in the leg.

"We told the officers over the bull horn to stay back, then she opened the door and started firing," he said. There were "almost a hundred" officers surrounding the motel, said the wife of the owner, Mrs. David Doty.

The sawed-off M1 carbine had been fitted with a pistol handle so it could be used as a hand gun. Her wild flurry of shooting sent bullets through a screen door into Rockwell's car and flattened the tires on her own automobile.

The officers then opened fire with pistols, rifles and a shotgun. Miss Ramus fell to the ground, screaming. Police found a loaded 38-caliber revolver in her clothing, and a 22-caliber rifle and a .44 magnum carbine inside the room, along with ammunition for all the weapons and a fountain-pen tear-gas gun.

Authorities had been looking for Miss Ramus since last September 13, when she and Johan M. Bosley, 29, of Spokane, both held on forgery charges, used smuggled-in hacksaw blades to saw through the bars on a cell window in the Spokane city jail.

They jumped from their third-floor cell window to the roof of the men's quarters on the second floor, then two stories to the ground. Miss Bosley was seriously injured in the last jump and was left behind.

Miss Ramus and three other persons were accused of counterfeiting $40,000 worth of $20 bills, and printing $5,000 worth of fake unemployment, welfare and railroad pay checks. She is also charged with armed robbery in the $1,325 holdup of a market in a Seattle suburb.

Officers had watched the motel room all Saturday afternoon, hoping she might come outside. Her brother and an unidentified man visited her for several hours. Police said she apparently had returned to the Northwest to visit relatives.

Soviets Pull Teams out of U.S. Meets

MOSCOW (AP)—The Soviet Union announced today its track and field and basketball teams will not play against the United States this year in protest against the United States fighting Viet Nam, the official soviet news agency, Tass., reported.

The Soviet men's and women's track team was scheduled to meet the United States in Los Angeles July 23-24.

An American basketball team is in training in the United States for a trip to Russia.

In addition to the Russians, a Polish men's and women's track team was scheduled to compete against the United States in Berkeley, Calif., July 16-17.

An earlier report from Warsaw said the Polish team was planning to leave Wednesday for California.

A spokesman for the U.S. Embassy said that it had not been officially notified of the Soviet decision. The embassy had no immediate comment.

Earlier, the embassy had reported that about 100 Soviet track athletes had been granted visas for the United States. There had been no indication that the Russians would pull out.

The American basketball team of 13 players was due to come to Russia for a series of eight games, starting July 25 in Moscow. The team was to play here after games in East Europe.

Such decisions as the two teams reportedly took are made in this country only with Communist party approval — and often at party instigation.

Henson, hit in the chest and arm, died on the way to a hospital.

$600,000.00 is a lot of money. Yet, all of us in the Hospital service area would be glad to give that much money if it were to save the lives of our loved ones.

In order to build the new wing to our hospital, all of us must give a generous amount- as if it were to save our lives. We can do it.

2,751,000 Missourians Eligible to Vote in Fall

WASHINGTON, D. C. -- Missouri will have 2,751,000 persons old enough to vote (21 years old) in the election this fall, information released by the Bureau of the Census shows.

This will be 117,000 more than were old enough to vote in the last presidential election.

The bureau study projects the population for 1968 and claims that the state will have 2,777,000 old enough to vote in the 1968 presidential election. This will be 301,000 more than were eligible in 1964.

However, all Missourians do not go to the polls and vote, or at least have not in the past. The Bureau of Census reported that in 1964 two - thirds of those old enough to vote did for president. Only 65 persons out of 100 voted for representative in the House. In 1962 only 45 percent of those of eligible age voted for representative.

Pea Pickin' May Replace Cotton Pickin' in Bootheel

Pea pickers, corn huskers and peachpluckers likely will invade the cotton-pickin' Missouri Delta Area in southeast Missouri as a result of a recent feasibility study.

The study, "The Economic Feasibility of Commercial Fruit and Vegetable Production and Processing in The Missouri Delta," was instigated to determine the economic feasibility of producing fruits and vegetables and the practicality of establishing one or more processing plants in the traditionally cotton-growing areas.

The report wad made by the University of Missouri Agricultural Experiment Station in cooperation with the Economic Research Service, U. S. Department of Agriculture as a result of a request for technical assistance by the Missouri Division of Commerce and Industrial Development.

The Economic Development Administration, U. S. Department of Commerce, provided a substantial share of costs for conducting the study engineered by Prof. Tom Brown, Agricultural Economics, University of Missouri, and James L. Pearson, Economic Research Service, USDA, University of Fla.

The study cites the seven-county Missouri Delta for its abundance of level productive land, unlimited water for irrigation and large, well-financed farm units, all of which provide the needed resources for vegetable production.

The authors point out that production and processing of vegetables are economically feasible.

Cotton acreage has declined 20 percent in the Delta since 1950 and rapid adoption of mechanical cotton pickers has greatly reduced the labor required on remaining cotton acreage; consequently, fewer jobs are available in the area, particularly for seasonal day labor.

Findings indicate that production of vegetable raw materials would increase net and gross farm income of the area by almost $75,000 and $395,000 respectively.

The analysis reveals that seasonal day laborers currently underemployed on farms in the area would be able to work an additional 102,000 hours in the production of vegetable crops. This would, according to the study, increase their income $61,200 annually.

Researchers brought together data from various informational sources relative to the production, processing and marketing of fruits and vegetables. Based on this information, a group of products was selected for further analysis of economic feasibility of production and processing.

In a processing plant analysis, specifications for a freezing plant and canning plant were developed. Buildings, equipment and variable input requirements were obtained in detail. Costs and returns for annual operation of each plant were computed. Resultant profits, after deduction of corporate income taxes, provided the necessary measurements of processing feasibility.

Fruits and vegetables have been grown in the Delta for several years. Production generally has been limited to the fresh market, though some producers have grown products for processors. No fruit and vegetable processing facilities presently are located in the area.

A group of interested farmers and businessmen in southeast Missouri is actively seeking processors interested in the Delta.

The growing number of program participators have enlisted temporary services of the Missouri Delta Development Corporation, Portageville, until a permanent organization of farmers can be established.

The seven counties form a fairly homogeneous economic area in terms of soil, cropping patterns and socio-economic features. Farm land in the area totals 2, 119,000 acres, 83 percent in cropland.

Soils of the area are alluvial, having been formed by the Mississippi, Ohio and St. Francis Rivers. Approximately 50 percent of the soil is fine sandy loam, the other half ranging from light blow sand to heavy gumbo clays. The entire area is underlain with water for irrigation at depths of less than 60 feet.

WASHINGTON, D. C. -- Farmers of Stoddard county sell $23,361,601 worth of their products a year, a preliminary report of the recent Census of Agriculture showed.

This is about $11,491 per farm, or an increase of $3,000 per farm over the earnings reported by the previous Census of Agriculture. Field crops accounted for more than $19 million of the products while livestock, and livestock products, including poultry and dairy products, accounted for the remainder.

The census disclosed that 113 farms in Stoddard county sell more than $40,000 each a year, while 348 farms have sales of between $10,000 and $20,000 a year. But 329 farms sell between $2,500 and $5,000 worth of farm products each year.

The farmers of the county sell 301,816 dozen eggs a year, and also more than 3 million pounds of whole milk.

Soviets Pull Teams out of U.S. Meets

MOSCOW (AP)—The Soviet Union announced today its track and field and basketball teams will not play against the United States this year in protest against the United States fighting Viet Nam, the official soviet news agency, Tass., reported.

The Soviet men's and women's track team was scheduled to meet the United States in Los Angeles July 23-24.

An American basketball team is in training in the United States for a trip to Russia.

In addition to the Russians, a Polish men's and women's track team was scheduled to compete against the United States in Berkeley, Calif., July 16-17.

An earlier report from Warsaw said the Polish team was planning to leave Wednesday for California.

A spokesman for the U.S. Embassy said that it had not been officially notified of the Soviet decision. The embassy had no immediate comment.

Earlier, the embassy had reported that about 100 Soviet track athletes had been granted visas for the United States. There had been no indication that the Russians would pull out.

The American basketball team of 13 players was due to come to Russia for a series of eight games, starting July 25 in Moscow. The team was to play here after games in East Europe.

Such decisions as the two teams reportedly took are made in this country only with Communist party approval — and often at party instigation.

Man Fatally Wounded Resisting Son's Arrest

NEWBURG, Mo. AP -- Walter Henson, 59, of Newburg, was shot to death Saturday night during a fight with two city officers who had arrested Henson's son.

Charles Slawson, city marshal and his deputy, Lester Slawson, arrested Jack Henson, 22, for a traffic violation.

The highway patrol said the elder Henson knocked the marshal down outside a pool hall and was starting to take the officer's gun when the deputy fired twice with a .32 caliber automatic pistol.

Henson, hit in the chest and arm, died on the way to a hospital.

$600,000.00 is a lot of money. Yet, all of us in the Hospital service area would be glad to give that much money if it were to save the lives of our loved ones.

In order to build the new wing to our hospital, all of us must give a generous amount-- as if it were to save our lives. We can do it.

Speaker Surprised By Own Firepower

CAPE GIRARDEAU, Mo. AP -- Supreme Court Justice James A. Finch Jr., was speaking Friday night when the paper his notes were written on caught fire.

With smoke and flames rising in front of him, the justice quickly threw the paper to the floor, stomped out the flames and commented: "I knew it was a hot speech."

The paper caught fire from a candle on a table in front of the speaker's stand. Using his charred notes, Finch continued his speech lauding Rush H. Limbaugh of Cape Girardeau, who has been an attorney for 50 years.

2,751,000 Missourians Eligible to Vote in Fall

WASHINGTON, D. C. -- Missouri will have 2,751,000 persons old enough to vote (21 years old) in the election this fall, information released by the Bureau of the Census shows.

This will be 117,000 more than were old enough to vote in the last presidential election.

The bureau study projects the population for 1968 and claims that the state will have 2,777,000 old enough to vote in the 1968 presidential election. This will be 301,000 more than were eligible in 1964.

However, all Missourians do not go to the polls and vote, or at least have not in the past. The Bureau of Census reported that in 1964 two - thirds of those old enough to vote did for president. Only 65 persons out of 100 voted for representative in the House. In 1962 only 45 percent of those of eligible age voted for representative.

THE AGENCY AGAIN

Sen. J. William Fulbright (D Ark.) promises on Thursday, July 14, to demand a showdown vote on his plan to place the CIA under broader congressional scrutiny.

FOR MANY YEARS the Fun Thing in Washington has been to poke fun at The Agency. What is meant is the Central Intelligence Agency, the only government agency in the nation's capital which is automatically given capital letters in cocktail and other conversation.

Unfortunately, The Agency gives plenty of occasion for this kind of chaffing. Its arrogance is notorious; its hiding behind Department of State credentials -- even to wives' charge accounts at Washington department stores -- approaches ostrichism; its double-dealings, even limited to those on record, are numerous. It is accused of acting beyond its mandate, of spending lavishly.

In a remarkable hostile book -- and the CIA has had plenty of those written about it -- the authors of "The Invisible Government" (1964) say that the nation "spends about $4 billion a year" on the CIA. They go on:

"The exact figure is one of the most tightly held secrets of the government and it appears in none of the federal budget documents, public or private. It is unknown, in fact, even to many of the key figures in the Invisible Government. Because the intelligence community is carefully fragmented, those in one branch find it difficult to estimate the budgets of the others."

NOW ALL THESE CHARGES may be considered as nothing when one acknowledges that the subject is the central source of secret information about all one's national enemies -- and, for that matter, friends. Spying is always a dirty business and usually an embarrassing thing for a democracy. Much of the work of the CIA is research, some of which is pedestrian, and some of which is quite shrewd. Only in its "black" operations and in its "Department of Dirty Tricks" does it lay itself open to criticism.

But here the criticism is real, vital, and continuing. On Thursday Sen. J. William Fulbright is going to ask for a showdown vote in the Senate on a proposal that would increase congressional surveillance of CIA. The scheme would add representatives of the Foreign Relations Committee to representatives of two other powerful Senate committees, Armed Services and Appropriations, who now watch the operations of the national spy agency. The new group would be called the Select Committee on Intelligence Operations.

NUMEROUS ATTEMPTS have been made in Congress, far too many to be listed here, to put a shorter rein on The Agency. The answer invariably is that the House Armed Services subcommittee and the corresponding Senate subcommittee each maintains intimate surveillance on espionage and counter-espionage activities.

But a deeper consideration is involved. Sen. Fulbright, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, has raised the question that the people in CIA "greatly influence foreign policy." In debate on the Senate floor on May 16, Sen. Richard B. Russell (D Ga.), chairman of the Senate subcommittee on CIA, said that "it is sheer poppycock that the CIA is making its own foreign policy."

There is, of course, a vital shade of difference between the thrust and the parry -- the difference between "influencing" and "making" U. S. foreign policy. The Fulbright proposal, which he calls "modest," probably is doomed to failure. Too much publicity about national security is to be avoided. But perhaps a Senate debate about the $4 billion intelligence complex for which senators and representatives appropriate the money but know little about would be healthy.

THE VALUE of the seminars in part stems from the outside moderators brought in from various fields of expertise, in part from the work of a most professional staff, in part from the real and essential contributions of the seminarists themselves.

At a recent session, of which Malcolm F. Mallette, A.P.I. associate director and former managing editor of the Winston-Salem Journal, was the staff representative, the outsiders included, in addition to newspaper people, Dr. Zbigniew W. Brezezinski, director of the Research Institute on Communist Affairs, Columbia University; Prof. John Stoessinger of Hunter College; Dr. John H. Fischer, president of Columbia University Teachers College; Irving J. Rubin, Detroit Regional Transportation and Land Use Study; David A. Crane, associate professor of Civic Design, University of Pennsylvania; Whitney M. Young, Jr., executive director, National Urban League; and William F. Haddad, adviser to Mayor Lindsay of New York and former Inspector General of the federal Office of Economic Opportunity.

The seminars are shirtsleeves as well as off the record, and much of their educative value comes from nonscheduled after-hours discussions. One recent participant reports: "I was impressed mainly by the calibre of my fellow seminarists . . . I felt I was in a gathering of my peers . . . and proud to be there."

When the average person thinks about the American economy, he is inclined to think of "pure competition." Actually pure competition does not exist.

Most industries operate under an oligopoly situation -- that is, where the number of sellers is so small that they have to consider competitor reactions to every action they initiate.

Service stations typically fall into this classification on the local level. Sometimes a certain station's actions may result in a city-wide "gas war." The average firm under oligopoly would not consider raising the price in a price conscious market if competitors were not likely to follow, since his sales would drop greatly.

Although this situation is not composed of what the typical citizen may think of as "pure competition," it is not necessarily a bad situation.

In conditions of this type it is necessary that the firms advertise, especially if productions are different, such as "octane-blended" and "super premium."

Oligopoly may not immediately lead to the lowest price by producers, but advertising gradually tends to bring prices to the lowest feasible level. Since national producers have to enact aggressive policies in order to operate, the consumer is treated to lower prices and improved products.

Retailers who sell these products meet with the same situation. By direct advertising they increase local sales. Again a savings is effected to the consumer. Local level sales depend greatly on advertising to provide the stimulus for consumer shopping in certain businesses. In any type of market, however, a retailer can improve profits by advertising.

Colonel E. I. (Mike) Hockaday, Superintendent of the Missouri Highway Patrol, has called upon everyone to do his part in protecting children in traffic.

The Patrol Superintendent pointed out that over 70 pedestrians under 15 years of age were either killed or injured in accidents investigated by the Patrol last year.

"It's up to parents, motorists and the children themselves to combat this condition," declaredColonel Hockaday. "By example and education parents can teach their youngsters good habits of walking in traffic that will help protect them in our busy, motorized world. If you, as a parent, always look both ways before crossing streets and cross only at intersections or other designated crosswalks, your child will grow up with these same safe habits."

The Patrol Superintendent also stated to parents that safety rules should be as inflexible and require the same respect as other rules of conduct.

Colonel Hockaday then reminded motorists of their responsibility in regard to young pedestrians. "Children are a particularly great hazard to the motorist. A clear road ahead may suddenly contain a child retrieving a ball or pursuing his runaway pet. Particularly in residential areas, motorists should slow down and increase their alertness.

"Young boys and girls must also do their part to avoid a traffic mishap," the Colonel continued. "They should follow the instructions offered by their parents and do all they can to safeguard themselves in traffic."

Colonel Hockaday concluded by reminding both motorists and children to be extra careful during this time of the year. He said, "There will be many motorists and children on and around the roadways the next few warm months. I urge everyone to respect the rights of one another and do everything possible to prevent a traffic accident."

EVERYBODY'S HAPPY

This is a model story from Holland:

A merchant went to a farmer near Amsterdam to get a pound of butter. The farmer insisted on swapping the butter for a pair of woolen socks. The merchant went home and reported to his wife.

"We have a woolen bedspread," she said. "I'll unravel it and knit a pair of socks." So she proceeded to make the pair of socks and the merchant exchanged them for a pound of butter.

When the merchant needed more butter, his wife would unravel more of the bedspread to be exchanged for the butter. Finally, one day she had enough wool left for only one sock.

The merchant took it to the farmer and asked for a half pound of butter for it.

"No, I'll give you a full pound, said the farmer. "You see, I really don't wear the socks. My wife unravels the wool and uses it for knitting a bedspread, and there's just enough in this sock to finish it."

NO UKASE IS NEEDED

During the last session of Congress, there was a good deal of discussion over proposed measures that, allegedly, are needed in the name of "consumer protection". And during the coming session this matter promises to be a prominent one.

The proposed "protections", in almost every instance, consist of giving a federal bureaucracy sweeping powers over the goods from which the consumer may pick and choose. They involve labeling and the size and kind of packages. The whole idea is to impose a dull and sterile uniformity on a long list of consumer wares, including foods.

No one objects to laws which demand honest statements of weights and measures and what is inside the package. These laws are in effect everywhere, and if in some instances they need to be strengthened that certainly can be done without lessening competition and arbitrarily restricting the consumers' freedom of choice. There is no conceivable need, for instance, for a ukase from Big Brother which will tell a producer what kind of a package he may use in an effort to stimulate sales, and what a retailer can offer.

These proposals, it seems, are predicated on the idea that consumers are generally incompetent and just aren't able to look out for their own interests. Actually, as just about any storekeeper can tell you, the situation is utterly different. The housewife is a wily shopper. She compares, judges and selects. If she ever feels she has been deluded or exploited, she is through with that particular brand of merchandise -- and, possibly, with the store which sold it. She is her own best policeman.

LET'S END IT WITH THIS

It is no small thing that affects the daily lives of eight million people.

Yet eight million, to use a conservative figure, is only about 1/25th of the whole population and it would be understandable if many Americans were to look upon the New York transportation strike as a local affair.

Reaction to it might well be similar to reading a newspaper account of a famine in far-off India: One shudders, gives silent thanks that he is not involved, then turns to another page.

"My Compliments to the Chef!"

But what we witnessed is not merely another demonstration of the much put-upon New Yorker's amazing ability to cope with chronic inconveniences and periodic crises.

What took place has a national significance. It was a showdown between the right of workingmen to strike for improved conditions and the right of the state to forbid public employes to do so as jeopardizing the public weal.

It was an assault on civil authority and on the law itself, symbolized by union leader Michael Quill's tearing up of court orders on television, an act of phony martyrdom which put him in the same class as draft card-burners and others who place themselves above the law.

It was an appalling display of civic irresponsibility and contemptuous disregard for the welfare of the majority and as such marks a black day in the history of the labor movement, a negation of decades of maturing labor-management relations.

The strikers will, most likely, receive their increased benefits retroactively, after they finally agreed to arbitration and the strike ended. But who will retroactively compensate the city and its millions of citizens?

Who will pay them for their lost business, lost wages, lost appointments, worn-out shoes and tattered nerves?

No one possibly could, of course. But hard cash -- lots of it, in the form of severe punitive fines such as were leveled against John L. Lewis and his United Mine Workers back in 1947 -- will go far toward insuring that this strike is recorded as the last example of its kind.

THAT SITTING PIGEON

The American motorist has been a sitting pigeon for the road builders. Gasoline taxes have gone up year after year, in state after state, and have reached a level that no other necessity must carry.

The theory has been aired that motorists really don't mind -- that, in fact, they are willing and even eager to pay higher taxes to finance road building programs on just about any scale. But there are signs that this theory is without basis -- and that the overtaxed motorist is beginning to kick up his heels in protest.

Wisconsin provides a concrete example of that. On April 7th an advisory referendum was held there. It called for an expression of voter sentiment on a proposal to increase the state gasoline tax. Close to one million votes were cast. And the proposal was slaughtered by a six to one margin.

This has been hailed, with full accuracy, as "an encouraging victory for motorists everywhere." And it is the kind of victory that is needed in all the other states -- and in the federal government, which levies a 4 cent tax on every gallon of gas you buy.

H. L. Hunt Says

FOR FREEDOM TOURS

June 22, Mrs. Hunt and I took three daughters, June 1, Helen 17, and Swanee 16, Miss Hanora O'Sullivan of New York and three other girls to Beverly Hills, California.

These youngsters comprised a team known as FREEDOM TEEN TOURS, each to make 3 1/4 minute freedom talks as best they could, of a factual and patriotic nature.

They were not critical of present day youth who join demonstrations against patriots and anyone otherwise dedicated to love of country. They did give positive testimony in behalf of our greatest nation and the freedom guaranteed only in the light of liberty.

These girls were aware that to develop eloquence and fully employ pathos to instill deep emotion, they will need to practice for many hours, just as they have practiced the songs they have sung for years.

On this first trip, they depended on emphasis and voice inflection; but in the short time, none of them developed the ability to induce joyous laughter and a minute later a shedding of a few tears.

In L.A. the most expert in the entertainment and publicity fields said the performance of the girls was definitely "a show," and their fresh, amateurish delivery made their message more appealing.

Upon their return from California, six of them began accepting invitations to speak at service club luncheons, breakfasts, at prayer meetings and small gatherings, where they have been warmly received and commended.

Others enlisted, two girls and a boy spoke at the Fourth of July Celebration featuring dancers and band from Minot, North Dakota, attending the National Convention of Elks. HLH

NEW YORK (AP) — Things a columnist might never know if he didn't open his mail:

Marriage expectancy is rising along with life expectancy. Average newlyweds today can look forward to living together 43 years — unless, of course, they try divorce.

Your skull is stronger and tougher than you think. It can stand weight of up to 3,600 pounds without being crushed.

Here's a wry footnote on togetherness: About 700 children in the United States commit murder each year — and in two-thirds of the cases the victim is a member of their own family.

Our changing ways: Only 50 years ago liver was regarded by many people as unfit for human consumption and it was fed chiefly to pets. Butchers often gave it away; now it is one of the most expensive of meats.

It has been found that mosquitoes are more likely to bite sick than healthy persons. Maybe it's because they figure that a guy with tired blood is also too tired to swat them.

Prosperity note: Four out of every five U.S. families now own at least one automobile. And one in five families owns two or more cars.

Quotable notables: "Never think that war, no matter how necessary, nor how justified, is not a crime. Ask the infantry and ask the dead." — Ernest Hemingway.

No civilized man wore pants until after the fall of the Roman Empire. Barbarians wrapped skins around their legs to keep out the cold. Roman civilians wore long robes, Roman soldiers short skirts to give them freedom of action. But by the year 600 most European men were clad in trousers.

It costs roughly $2,300 a year to keep an inmate in federal prison, just about the same amount it would take to send him to a good state university.

Musical tribute: More songs have probably been written about President Franklin D. Roosevelt than any other 20th century figure — over 100.

In normal conversation you speak about 125 words a minute. However, the mind can take in and understand from 400 to 700 words a minute — which fortunately, is about as fast as anyone can gossip anyway.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON -- Ever since members of Sen. Dodd's staff copied his files, there has been national comment as to whether they were right in so doing.

U. S. Judge Alexander Holtzoff stated they were under obligation to report wrongdoing by the senator to the justice department but not to Jack Anderson and me.

In New York this week, a secret hearing is taking place under the auspices of former New York State Court of Appeals Judge Bruce Bromley, now retired, which illustrates the difficulties faced by the press and even the justice department in prosecuting high officials, especially when the official is connected with a senator or a potent congressman.

The secret hearing pertains to ex-Judge Vincent Keogh of the New York Supreme Court, who was convicted of taking a $30,000 bribe in a jukebox case involving Antonio (Tony Ducks) Corallo.

Though Judge Keogh was tried before one of the most respected of federal judges, District Judge Edward Weinfield, and found guilty by a jury in a verdict which was not reversed in the upper courts, nevertheless Keogh has now asked for a hearing on disbarment, and in this hearing the bribery case is virtually being tried all over again.

Judge Keogh is alleging that William Hundley, the respected justice department attorney who tried his case, withheld facts and acted unfairly. Hundley was an Eisenhower appointee, has remained on under the Democrats, is completely non-partisan, leaned over backward to prosecute the case fairly.

Significantly, the rehearing of the Judge Keogh case is held behind closed doors. The public and press are not permitted to be present.

Vincent Keogh is the brother of dapper Gene Keogh, the able congressman from Brooklyn, who is one of the most powerful Democrats in New York.

Note -- The bribery case against Judge Keogh was brought only after there was a certain amount of publicity in the press which focused attention on one of the worst scandals in judicial history since the conviction of Judge Martin Manton.

DODD'S DOCUMENTS

Michael V. O'Hare, former member of Sen. Dodd's staff, has made an interesting and forthright statement to Time Magazine as to why he helped remove documents from Dodd's office. It had been reported that O'Hare was motivated by revenge because his friend, Miss Terry Golden, had been fired by Dodd.

"In my testimony before the Committee on Standards and Ethics," O'Hare explained, "I VOLUNTEERED that I took the bulk of the documents with which I was particularly concerned on the weekend that Miss Golden was dismissed. Your article infers a possible motive of bitterness or revenge over her dismissal. Nothing could be further from the truth. Under ordinary circumstances he would have welcomed Miss Golden's departure from the office at this time. It was the equivalent of being exiled from Rome the day before I burned."

O'Hare then summarized the reason why he took this unusual step.

"We belived we were witness to grave misconduct in office," said O'Hare. "I played an extremely delicate role on the senator's staff for over six months, because I believed that this disclosure of Sen. Dodd's activities was in the public interest."

INSIDE THE WHITE HOUSE

President Johnson was holding a staff conference regarding the political problems of Viet Nam. He complained that he had tried suggestions put forward by almost everyone.

He had talked to Ambassador Lodge, he said, about the problems of Viet Nam, but Lodge's ideas hadn't achieved results. He said he had talked to Sen. Fulbright of Arkansas, the critic of his Viet Nam policy, but Fulbright's ideas hadn't worked.

"I put Lansdale over there," continued the President, "but nothing happened."

His voice sounded especially critical. At this point the President leaned back in his chair as he frequently does. Just behind him, and near enough so he could have bopped him on the head, sat General Landsdale.

Lansdale said nothing. He is the man who performed wonders in the Philippines in the way of village reform and was sent to Viet Nam to stabilize and built up its villages. There, however, he has not been successful.

One reason is that he can't get the same cooperation of top officials in South Viet Nam that he got in the Philippines. In the latter country Lansdale worked directly with President Magsaysay to cut red tape, get things moving. In South Viet Nam, Lansdale has to work through Ambassador Lodge, who doesn't like anyone going over his head to talk to top Vietnamese officials.

Battle to Influence LBJ on Red China Looms Between Reuther Brothers and Meany

WASHINGTON, D. C. -- East is East and West is West, but the twain does meet in the East-West Center, an intriguing government operation on the campus of the University of Hawaii in balmy Honolulu.

And soon that peaceful campus will be the site of battle between the forces of George Meany and the legions of the brothers Reuther -- Walter and Victor.

There have been early maneuverings in this new clash which has not yet made the national headlines.

But before this round is over next fall, the struggle between the blunt and inflexible anti-Communist AFL-CIO president George Meany, and the pro-coexistence Reuther brothers will involve the Central Intelligence Agency, the White House, the State Dept. and most of the nation's labor chiefs.

There will be insults and counter-charges -- but the basic issue is whether any sector of American labor should call for recognition of Communist China.

Meany is unmovably opposed to such dealings. The Reuthers are for it and for friendlier dealings with Soviet and Chinese bloc labor men.

Basically the infighting is to outflank the opposition and influence President Johnson who is opposed to such recognition and has said so to Meany.

But the President's advisers are split.

Thus the stakes are global. And every little maneuver has a meaning of its own. Therefore the latest move of the Reuthers brings us back to the East-West Center in Honolulu.

From September 5 to 9, the Center (which operates somewhat as an international university) will hold an Asiatic Industrial Labor Relations Conference. The program has been set under the title: Labor's Role in National Development. The guests have been invited.

Naturally they come from the broad sweep of that part of the world covered by the East-West Center -- Asia and Pacific rim nations, including the U.S.

This operation, it must be noted, is no ordinary conference.

The East-West Center is not actually part of the educational structure of the University of Hawaii.

East-West Center is a State Dept. project. It is under the Dept.'s Cultural Affairs section.

Funds for this Asian and Pacific studies group come from the general appropriation of the State Dept. The monies are voted by Congress -- which specifically earmarks the dollars.

When the House Appropriations Committee gets a little sticky about the allotment, Meany and his ubiquitously effective Washington lobbyist, Andy Biemiller, turn on a little labor pressure and the East-West chancellor breathes easier about his exchequer for the year.

Imagine, then, the spontaneous combustion inside the national AFL-CIO headquarters when the Asian labor relations conference program arrived all neatly printed.

Organizers of the conference, subsidized by some virtually anonymous foundation, invited no national AFL-CIO participant, though the U. S. labor federation is the free world's largest.

Instead, Victor Reuther, who has accused Meany and the AFL-CIO's International Affairs Dept. of being CIA fronts, was listed as the American labor participant. The young Reuther is the auto union's foreign affairs director.

Also on the schedule is a powerful Japanese labor official, Kaoru Ota, who has received the Lenin Peace Prize.

Obviously someone in the State Dept. had ignored the inflexibly anti-Soviet and anti-Peking national AFL-CIO headquarters. The face of American labor in the parley would be that of Victor Reuther.

The AFL-CIO burned up the wires. It shot off a letter of protest.

It is communicating with all delegates whom it considers friendly to its own policy. It will not participate.

The conference is important because it will influence important Asiatic and Australian labor leaders.

And today's labor leader often is tomorrow's prime minister.

But not the least element of this story is the fact that the State Dept., or a vital section thereof, turned to the Reuthers, and not the Meany forces, for advice.

Obviously the challenge has been hurled at Meany. He is not one at whom to hurl things -- without first duck!

THE AGENCY AGAIN

Sen. J. William Fulbright (D Ark.) promises on Thursday, July 14, to demand a showdown vote on his plan to place the CIA under broader congressional scrutiny.

FOR MANY YEARS the Fun Thing in Washington has been to poke fun at The Agency. What is meant is the Central Intelligence Agency, the only government agency in the nation's capital which is automatically given capital letters in cocktail and other conversation.

Unfortunately, The Agency gives plenty of occasion for this kind of chaffing. Its arrogance is notorious; its hiding behind Department of State credentials -- even to wives' charge accounts at Washington department stores -- approaches ostrichism; its double-dealings, even limited to those on record, are numerous. It is accused of acting beyond its mandate, of spending lavishly.

In a remarkable hostile book -- and the CIA has had plenty of those written about it -- the authors of "The Invisible Government" (1964) say that the nation "spends about $4 billion a year" on the CIA. They go on:

"The exact figure is one of the most tightly held secrets of the government and it appears in none of the federal budget documents, public or private. It is unknown, in fact, even to many of the key figures in the Invisible Government. Because the intelligence community is carefully fragmented, those in one branch find it difficult to estimate the budgets of the others."

NOW ALL THESE CHARGES may be considered as nothing when one acknowledges that the subject is the central source of secret information about all one's national enemies -- and, for that matter, friends. Spying is always a dirty business and usually an embarrassing thing for a democracy. Much of the work of the CIA is research, some of which is pedestrian, and some of which is quite shrewd. Only in its "black" operations and in its "Department of Dirty Tricks" does it lay itself open to criticism.

But here the criticism is real, vital, and continuing. On Thursday Sen. J. William Fulbright is going to ask for a showdown vote in the Senate on a proposal that would increase congressional surveillance of CIA. The scheme would add representatives of the Foreign Relations Committee to representatives of two other powerful Senate committees, Armed Services and Appropriations, who now watch the operations of the national spy agency. The new group would be called the Select Committee on Intelligence Operations.

NUMEROUS ATTEMPTS have been made in Congress, far too many to be listed here, to put a shorter rein on The Agency. The answer invariably is that the House Armed Services subcommittee and the corresponding Senate subcommittee each maintains intimate surveillance on espionage and counter-espionage activities.

But a deeper consideration is involved. Sen. Fulbright, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, has raised the question that the people in CIA "greatly influence foreign policy." In debate on the Senate floor on May 16, Sen. Richard B. Russell (D Ga.), chairman of the Senate subcommittee on CIA, said that "it is sheer poppycock that the CIA is making its own foreign policy."

There is, of course, a vital shade of difference between the thrust and the parry -- the difference between "influencing" and "making" U. S. foreign policy. The Fulbright proposal, which he calls "modest," probably is doomed to failure. Too much publicity about national security is to be avoided. But perhaps a Senate debate about the $4 billion intelligence complex for which senators and representatives appropriate the money but know little about would be healthy.

THE VALUE of the seminars in part stems from the outside moderators brought in from various fields of expertise, in part from the work of a most professional staff, in part from the real and essential contributions of the seminarists themselves.

At a recent session, of which Malcolm F. Mallette, A.P.I. associate director and former managing editor of the Winston-Salem Journal, was the staff representative, the outsiders included, in addition to newspaper people, Dr. Zbigniew W. Brezezinski, director of the Research Institute on Communist Affairs, Columbia University; Prof. John Stoessinger of Hunter College; Dr. John H. Fischer, president of Columbia University Teachers College; Irving J. Rubin, Detroit Regional Transportation and Land Use Study; David A. Crane, associate professor of Civic Design, University of Pennsylvania; Whitney M. Young, Jr., executive director, National Urban League; and William F. Haddad, adviser to Mayor Lindsay of New York and former Inspector General of the federal Office of Economic Opportunity.

The seminars are shirtsleeves as well as off the record, and much of their educative value comes from nonscheduled after-hours discussions. One recent participant reports: "I was impressed mainly by the calibre of my fellow seminarists . . . I felt I was in a gathering of my peers . . . and proud to be there."

When the average person thinks about the American economy, he is inclined to think of "pure competition." Actually pure competition does not exist.

Most industries operate under an oligopoly situation -- that is, where the number of sellers is so small that they have to consider competitor reactions to every action they initiate.

Service stations typically fall into this classification on the local level. Sometimes a certain station's actions may result in a city-wide "gas war." The average firm under oligopoly would not consider raising the price in a price conscious market if competitors were not likely to follow, since his sales would drop greatly.

Although this situation is not composed of what the typical citizen may think of as "pure competition," it is not necessarily a bad situation.

In conditions of this type it is necessary that the firms advertise, especially if productions are different, such as "octane-blended" and "super premium."

Oligopoly may not immediately lead to the lowest price by producers, but advertising gradually tends to bring prices to the lowest feasible level. Since national producers have to enact aggressive policies in order to operate, the consumer is treated to lower prices and improved products.

Retailers who sell these products meet with the same situation. By direct advertising they increase local sales. Again a savings is effected to the consumer. Local level sales depend greatly on advertising to provide the stimulus for consumer shopping in certain businesses. In any type of market, however, a retailer can improve profits by advertising.

Colonel E. I. (Mike) Hockaday, Superintendent of the Missouri Highway Patrol, has called upon everyone to do his part in protecting children in traffic.

The Patrol Superintendent pointed out that over 70 pedestrians under 15 years of age were either killed or injured in accidents investigated by the Patrol last year.

"It's up to parents, motorists and the children themselves to combat this condition," declaredColonel Hockaday. "By example and education parents can teach their youngsters good habits of walking in traffic that will help protect them in our busy, motorized world. If you, as a parent, always look both ways before crossing streets and cross only at intersections or other designated crosswalks, your child will grow up with these same safe habits."

The Patrol Superintendent also stated to parents that safety rules should be as inflexible and require the same respect as other rules of conduct.

Colonel Hockaday then reminded motorists of their responsibility in regard to young pedestrians. "Children are a particularly great hazard to the motorist. A clear road ahead may suddenly contain a child retrieving a ball or pursuing his runaway pet. Particularly in residential areas, motorists should slow down and increase their alertness.

"Young boys and girls must also do their part to avoid a traffic mishap," the Colonel continued. "They should follow the instructions offered by their parents and do all they can to safeguard themselves in traffic."

Colonel Hockaday concluded by reminding both motorists and children to be extra careful during this time of the year. He said, "There will be many motorists and children on and around the roadways the next few warm months. I urge everyone to respect the rights of one another and do everything possible to prevent a traffic accident."

EVERYBODY'S HAPPY

This is a model story from Holland:

A merchant went to a farmer near Amsterdam to get a pound of butter. The farmer insisted on swapping the butter for a pair of woolen socks. The merchant went home and reported to his wife.

"We have a woolen bedspread," she said. "I'll unravel it and knit a pair of socks." So she proceeded to make the pair of socks and the merchant exchanged them for a pound of butter.

When the merchant needed more butter, his wife would unravel more of the bedspread to be exchanged for the butter. Finally, one day she had enough wool left for only one sock.

The merchant took it to the farmer and asked for a half pound of butter for it.

"No, I'll give you a full pound, said the farmer. "You see, I really don't wear the socks. My wife unravels the wool and uses it for knitting a bedspread, and there's just enough in this sock to finish it."

NO UKASE IS NEEDED

During the last session of Congress, there was a good deal of discussion over proposed measures that, allegedly, are needed in the name of "consumer protection". And during the coming session this matter promises to be a prominent one.

The proposed "protections", in almost every instance, consist of giving a federal bureaucracy sweeping powers over the goods from which the consumer may pick and choose. They involve labeling and the size and kind of packages. The whole idea is to impose a dull and sterile uniformity on a long list of consumer wares, including foods.

No one objects to laws which demand honest statements of weights and measures and what is inside the package. These laws are in effect everywhere, and if in some instances they need to be strengthened that certainly can be done without lessening competition and arbitrarily restricting the consumers' freedom of choice. There is no conceivable need, for instance, for a ukase from Big Brother which will tell a producer what kind of a package he may use in an effort to stimulate sales, and what a retailer can offer.

These proposals, it seems, are predicated on the idea that consumers are generally incompetent and just aren't able to look out for their own interests. Actually, as just about any storekeeper can tell you, the situation is utterly different. The housewife is a wily shopper. She compares, judges and selects. If she ever feels she has been deluded or exploited, she is through with that particular brand of merchandise -- and, possibly, with the store which sold it. She is her own best policeman.

LET'S END IT WITH THIS

It is no small thing that affects the daily lives of eight million people.

Yet eight million, to use a conservative figure, is only about 1/25th of the whole population and it would be understandable if many Americans were to look upon the New York transportation strike as a local affair.

Reaction to it might well be similar to reading a newspaper account of a famine in far-off India: One shudders, gives silent thanks that he is not involved, then turns to another page.

But what we witnessed is not merely another demonstration of the much put-upon New Yorker's amazing ability to cope with chronic inconveniences and periodic crises.

What took place has a national significance. It was a showdown between the right of workingmen to strike for improved conditions and the right of the state to forbid public employes to do so as jeopardizing the public weal.

It was an assault on civil authority and on the law itself, symbolized by union leader Michael Quill's tearing up of court orders on television, an act of phony martyrdom which put him in the same class as draft card-burners and others who place themselves above the law.

It was an appalling display of civic irresponsibility and contemptuous disregard for the welfare of the majority and as such marks a black day in the history of the labor movement, a negation of decades of maturing labor-management relations.

The strikers will, most likely, receive their increased benefits retroactively, after they finally agreed to arbitration and the strike ended. But who will retroactively compensate the city and its millions of citizens?

Who will pay them for their lost business, lost wages, lost appointments, worn-out shoes and tattered nerves?

No one possibly could, of course. But hard cash -- lots of it, in the form of severe punitive fines such as were leveled against John L. Lewis and his United Mine Workers back in 1947 -- will go far toward insuring that this strike is recorded as the last example of its kind.

THAT SITTING PIGEON

The American motorist has been a sitting pigeon for the road builders. Gasoline taxes have gone up year after year, in state after state, and have reached a level that no other necessity must carry.

The theory has been aired that motorists really don't mind -- that, in fact, they are willing and even eager to pay higher taxes to finance road building programs on just about any scale. But there are signs that this theory is without basis -- and that the overtaxed motorist is beginning to kick up his heels in protest.

Wisconsin provides a concrete example of that. On April 7th an advisory referendum was held there. It called for an expression of voter sentiment on a proposal to increase the state gasoline tax. Close to one million votes were cast. And the proposal was slaughtered by a six to one margin.

This has been hailed, with full accuracy, as "an encouraging victory for motorists everywhere." And it is the kind of victory that is needed in all the other states -- and in the federal government, which levies a 4 cent tax on every gallon of gas you buy.

FOR FREEDOM TOURS

June 22, Mrs. Hunt and I took three daughters, June 1, Helen 17, and Swanee 16, Miss Hanora O'Sullivan of New York and three other girls to Beverly Hills, California.

These youngsters comprised a team known as FREEDOM TEEN TOURS, each to make 3 1/4 minute freedom talks as best they could, of a factual and patriotic nature.

They were not critical of present day youth who join demonstrations against patriots and anyone otherwise dedicated to love of country. They did give positive testimony in behalf of our greatest nation and the freedom guaranteed only in the light of liberty.

These girls were aware that to develop eloquence and fully employ pathos to instill deep emotion, they will need to practice for many hours, just as they have practiced the songs they have sung for years.

On this first trip, they depended on emphasis and voice inflection; but in the short time, none of them developed the ability to induce joyous laughter and a minute later a shedding of a few tears.

In L.A. the most expert in the entertainment and publicity fields said the performance of the girls was definitely "a show," and their fresh, amateurish delivery made their message more appealing.

Upon their return from California, six of them began accepting invitations to speak at service club luncheons, breakfasts, at prayer meetings and small gatherings, where they have been warmly received and commended.

Others enlisted, two girls and a boy spoke at the Fourth of July Celebration featuring dancers and band from Minot, North Dakota, attending the National Convention of Elks. HLH

Lansdale said nothing. He is the man who performed wonders in the Philippines in the way of village reform and was sent to Viet Nam to stabilize and built up its villages. There, however, he has not been successful.

One reason is that he can't get the same cooperation of top officials in South Viet Nam that he got in the Philippines. In the latter country Lansdale worked directly with President Magsaysay to cut red tape, got things moving. In South Viet Nam, Lansdale has to work through Ambassador Lodge, who doesn't like anyone going over his head to talk to top Vietnamese officials.

Battle to Influence LBJ on Red China Looms Between Reuther Brothers and Meany

WASHINGTON, D. C. -- East is East and West is West, but the twain does meet in the East-West Center, an intriguing government operation on the campus of the University of Hawaii in balmy Honolulu.

And soon that peaceful campus will be the site of battle between the forces of George Meany and the legions of the brothers Reuther -- Walter and Victor.

There have been early maneuverings in this new clash which has not yet made the national headlines.

But before this round is over next fall, the struggle between the blunt and inflexible anti-Communist AFL-CIO president George Meany, and the pro-coexistence Reuther brothers will involve the Central Intelligence Agency, the White House, the State Dept. and most of the nation's labor chiefs.

There will be insults and counter-charges -- but the basic issue is whether any sector of American labor should call for recognition of Communist China.

Meany is unmovably opposed to such dealings. The Reuthers are for it and for friendlier dealings with Soviet and Chinese bloc labor men.

Basically the infighting is to outflank the opposition and influence President Johnson who is opposed to such recognition and has said so to Meany.

But the President's advisers are split.

Thus the stakes are global. And every little maneuver has a meaning of its own. Therefore the latest move of the Reuthers brings us back to the East-West Center in Honolulu.

From September 5 to 9, the Center (which operates somewhat as an international university) will hold an Asiatic Industrial Labor Relations Conference. The program has been set under the title: Labor's Role in National Development. The guests have been invited.

Naturally they come from the broad sweep of that part of the world covered by the East-West Center -- Asia and Pacific rim nations, including the U.S.

This operation, it must be noted, is no ordinary conference.

The East-West Center is not actually part of the educational structure of the University of Hawaii.

East-West Center is a State Dept. project. It is under the Dept.'s Cultural Affairs section.

Funds for this Asian and Pacific studies group come from the general appropriation of the State Dept. The monies are voted by Congress -- which specifically earmarks the dollars.

When the House Appropriations Committee gets a little sticky about the allotment, Meany and his ubiquitously effective Washington lobbyist, Andy Biemiller, turn on a little labor pressure and the East-West chancellor breathes easier about his exchequer for the year.

Imagine, then, the spontaneous combustion inside the national AFL-CIO headquarters when the Asian labor relations conference program arrived all neatly printed.

Organizers of the conference, subsidized by some virtually anonymous foundation, invited no national AFL-CIO participant, though the U. S. labor federation is the free world's largest.

Instead, Victor Reuther, who has accused Meany and the AFL-CIO's International Affairs Dept. of being CIA fronts, was listed as the American labor participant. The young Reuther is the auto union's foreign affairs director.

Also on the schedule is a powerful Japanese labor official, Kaoru Ota, who has received the Lenin Peace Prize.

Obviously someone in the State Dept. had ignored the inflexibly anti-Soviet and anti-Peking national AFL-CIO headquarters. The face of American labor in the parley would be that of Victor Reuther.

The AFL-CIO burned up the wires. It shot off a letter of protest.

It is communicating with all delegates whom it considers friendly to its own policy. It will not participate.

The conference is important because it will influence important Asiatic and Australian labor leaders.

And today's labor leader often is tomorrow's prime minister.

But not the least element of this story is the fact that the State Dept., or a vital section thereof, turned to the Reuthers, and not the Meany forces, for advice.

Obviously the challenge has been hurled at Meany. He is not one at whom to hurl things -- without first duck'

Miss Donna Kathryn Conrad Is Wed to David Mikal Allen

SEDGEWICKVILLE -- The Whitewater Presbyterian church near here was the setting for the marriage, June 25, of Miss Donna Kathryn Conrad and David Mikal Allen, Patton.

The Rev. Stanley B. Hopper, assisted by the Rev. Clarence Liang, conducted the double ring service. Mrs. R. O. Laird, Jackson, was organist and Mrs. Wayne Johnson, Patton, and Peter R. Conrad, Jonesburg, were soloists.

The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David D. Conrad, Sedgewickville, and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Allen, Patton.

Entering with her father who gave her in marriage, the bride appeared in a gown of white peau de soie and Chantilly lace. Fashioned by her mother, the gown featured a fitted bodice, long-tapered sleeves which ended in points at the wrists and lace appliques at the neckline. Her skirt was semi-fitted, falling from soft pleats at the waistline, and it featured a panel of lace overlaid at the front and a chapel train of matching lace at back.

Her fingertip veil of illusion fell from a crown of pearls and rhinestones worn in her hair. Her bouquet was of carnations centered by an orchid and carried over a white Bible. She wore a strand of pearls and a gold heirloom bracelet which belonged to her grandmother, Mrs. Julius Conrad.

She walked down the aisle lined with white satin bows and baskets of white hydrangeas and honeysuckle and took her place at the altar, banked with baskets of hydranges and greenery. Lighted candels gleamed in candelabra.

Her attendants were Miss Sue Whaley, Sedgewickville, as maid of honor, a cousin, Miss Mary Bollinger, Jackson, and Miss Deborah Conrad, sister of the bride, as bridesmaids. They wore formal gowns of peau de soie similar to the bride's gown with fitted bodices overlaid with Chantilly lace. Each carried a bouquet of white carnations matching their dresses of apricot and aqua colors.

Martin Allen, Sikeston, was his brother's best man and Roy Allen and Tom Allen, Patton, served their brother as groomsmen. Jerry Boyd and Terry Conrad, brother of the bride, seated the wedding guests.

A reception followed in the church basement where the bride's table was covered with an apricot-colored lace cloth made by the bride's grandmother. Serving were Miss Peggy Whaley, Sedgewickville; Mrs. Robert G. Talley, Cape Girardeau; Mrs. Leland Nelson, Jackson, and Mrs. Harold W. Bollinger, Jackson, cousins of the bride. Mrs. Roy L. Allen of Patton was at the guest book.

Salt in Oceans

Major efforts are being made to find large-scale economical methods of extracting salt from the sea so that seawater can be used for drinking and other human needs. A gallon of seawater contains about ¼-pound of salt and, it is estimated, there are about 4.5 million cubic miles of salt in all the earth's oceans combined.

The side tables had floral centerpieces of daisies with a crystal candle holder with a blue candle on either side. Places were marked with white place cards decorated with daisies attached to blue nut cups.

Miss Spradling presented her attendants with white, shorty, lace-inserted, gloves they wore in the wedding. Taylor presented his attendants with engraved gold key chains. He presented his sister, Diane, with a charm bracelet, and to his bride-to-be, he gave a single strand of pearls made from a necklace his father brought to his mother when he returned from overseas at the end of World War II. These pearls were the only jewelry worn by the bride on her wedding day.

A floral arrangement completed the table decoration. The honoree, her mother, Mrs. Homer Spradling, and the groom's mother, Mrs. Ewart Taylor, were presented with corsages of white carnations with blue bows by the hostesses.

Miss Donna Kathryn Conrad Is Wed to David Mikal Allen

SEDGEWICKVILLE -- The Whitewater Presbyterian church near here was the setting for the marriage, June 25, of Miss Donna Kathryn Conrad and David Mikal Allen, Patton.

The Rev. Stanley B. Hopper, assisted by the Rev. Clarence Liang, conducted the double ring service. Mrs. R. O. Laird, Jackson, was organist and Mrs. Wayne Johnson, Patton, and Peter R. Conrad, Jonesburg, were soloists.

The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David D. Conrad, Sedgewickville, and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Allen, Patton.

Entering with her father who gave her in marriage, the bride appeared in a gown of white peau de soie and Chantilly lace. Fashioned by her mother, the gown featured a fitted bodice, long-tapered sleeves which ended in points at the wrists and lace appliques at the neckline. Her skirt was semi-fitted, falling from soft pleats at the waistline, and it featured a panel of lace overlaid at the front and a chapel train of matching lace at back.

Her fingertip veil of illusion fell from a crown of pearls and rhinestones worn in her hair. Her bouquet was of carnations centered by an orchid and carried over a white Bible. She wore a strand of pearls and a gold heirloom bracelet which belonged to her grandmother, Mrs. Julius Conrad.

She walked down the aisle lined with white satin bows and baskets of white hydrangeas and honeysuckle and took her place at the altar, banked with baskets of hydranges and greenery. Lighted candels gleamed in candelabra.

Her attendants were Miss Sue Whaley, Sedgewickville, as maid of honor, a cousin, Miss Mary Bollinger, Jackson, and Miss Deborah Conrad, sister of the bride, as bridesmaids. They wore formal gowns of peau de soie similar to the bride's gown with fitted bodices overlaid with Chantilly lace. Each carried a bouquet of white carnations matching their dresses of apricot and aqua colors.

Martin Allen, Sikeston, was his brother's best man and Roy Allen and Tom Allen, Patton, served their brother as groomsmen. Jerry Boyd and Terry Conrad, brother of the bride, seated the wedding guests.

A reception followed in the church basement where the bride's table was covered with an apricot-colored lace cloth made by the bride's grandmother. Serving were Miss Peggy Whaley, Sedgewickville; Mrs. Robert G. Talley, Cape Girardeau; Mrs. Leland Nelson, Jackson, and Mrs. Harold W. Bollinger, Jackson, cousins of the bride. Mrs. Roy L. Allen of Patton was at the guest book.

After a short wedding trip, Allen returned to Charleston, S. C., where he is stationed with the U. S. Navy. The former Miss Conrad will continue in her position as clerk for the U. S. Department of Agriculture in Marble Hill.

Salt in Oceans

Major efforts are being made to find large-scale economical methods of extracting salt from the sea so that seawater can be used for drinking and other human needs. A gallon of seawater contains about ¼-pound of salt and, it is estimated, there are about 4.5 million cubic miles of salt in all the earth's oceans combined.

Co-hostesses were Mrs. G. H. Jones, Mrs. Bob Ballard, Mrs. J. W. Godwin, and Mrs. Raymond Page.

The color scheme of yellow and leaf green that Miss Jackson has chosen for her wedding was used at the refreshment and gift gable. The refreshment table was covered with a floor-length white cloth and adorned at each corner with yellow bows and wedding bells. The table was centered with a wicker basket full of artificial vegetables which was later presented to the honoree as a gift from the hostesses. Yellow tapers in silver holders flanked the punch bowl.

In the decorations of the gift table, the focal point of interest was a large arch entwined with greenery and yellow morning glory flowers and love birds. Two wedding bells and a miniature bride and groom stood beneath the arch. Above the table, wedding bells were suspended from the ceiling among a shower of streamers of yellow and green.

During the evening, the game "Bride" was played for which prizes were awarded. The winners, in turn, presented the prize to the honoree. Also, the invited guests brought along their favorite recipe and gave to the bride-to-be.

NICKLAUS WINS BRITISH OPEN -- Jack Nicklaus, finally, has won the British Open Golf Championship. This had been the only title that Jack had never won. He scored a 70 in the final round and finished with a total score of 282 for the tournament winning the title for the first time.

NL Favored To Win 19th All-Star Game

ST. LOUIS, Mo. AP -- Right-hander Dennis McLain of Detroit and southpaw Sandy Koufax of Los Angeles were named today the starting pitchers for Tuesday's All-Star game.

The embarrassed American League, winner of only one of the last nine All-Star baseball games, is ready to go all out Tuesday against the favored National League's impressive array.

The National Leaguers have been taking blows for winning both the World Series and the All-Star Game in each of the last three years. Overcoming a 12-4 edge in the All-Star series once completely dominated by the American League, Willie Mays and Co. have taken the lead 18-17-1.

Sam Mele, the Minnesota skipper who will boss the American League, sounded the word before he left home.

"I'll use my eight starters all the way if it will help us win," said Mele. "I'm going to win this one. We'll play to win."

Walter Alston of the Los Angeles Dodgers can be counted upon to give his sluggers a similar message.

In the old days it was common for most of the pitchers to work the Sunday previous to the game. That no longer is the case.

Five of the 16 pitchers were used Sunday but the only starters were Steve Barber of Baltimore on the American side and Jim Bunning of Philadelphia on the National side. Pete Richert of Washington, Claude Raymond of Houston and Phil Regan of the Los Angeles Dodgers were used in relief.

Regan was a late addition to the staff. He was named by Alston to take the place of Bob Gibson when the St. Louis Cardinal ace came up with a sore elbow. Sam McDowell of Cleveland, who lasted less than an inning Sunday, also bowed out with a sore arm and was replaced by teammate Sonny Siebert.

Sandy Koufax of the Dodgers, the majors' top winner with a 15-4 record, worked Saturday. So did Gaylord Perry of San Francisco and Billy McCool of Cincinnati. Juan Marichal of San Francisco has rested since pitching a three-hitter for his 14th victory Friday. Bob Veale of Pittsburgh has not pitched since Thursday.

Three American League starters worked Saturday - Gary Bell of Cleveland, Catfish Hunter of Kansas City and Denny McLain of Detroit, the league's big winner with a 13-4 record. Jim Kaat of Minnesota and Mel Stottlemyre of New York were used Friday.

Both manager were scheduled to name their pitchers and batting orders at a morning news conference.

Alston, who had been undecided about coming to the game due to the illness of his mother, is expected to be on hand. If he cannot make it, Herman Franks of the league-leading San Francisco Giants will take his place.

All-Stars--Injuries struck the National League starting lineup forcing Alston to replace second baseman Joe Morgan of Houston with switch-hitting Jim Lefebvre of his Dodger club. Morgan suffered a broken knee cap a week ago.

Ron Santo, the Chicago Cubs, third baseman, retained his starting job, wearing a special face guard to protect his injured cheekbone.

The Nationals have the majors' top home run hitter in Hank Aaron of the Atlanta Braves in the outfield along with marvelous Willie Mays of the San Francisco Giants and Roberto Clemente of Pittsburgh.

Willie McCovey of San Francisco at first base, Lefebvre at second, Leo Cardenas of Cincinnati at short, Santo at third and Joe Torre of Atlanta as catcher completed the power-packed starting line-up.

Frank Robinson of Baltimore, anxious to show the Nationals that Cincinnati made a mistake in trading him, will team with Detroit's Al Kaline and Minnesota's Tony Oliva in the American outfield.

Rookie George Scott of Boston at first base, Bobby Knoop of California at second, Dick McAuliffe of Detroit at short, Brooks Robinson of Baltimore at third and Bill Freehan of Detroit as catcher are the other starters.

Brooks Robinson's 70 runs batted in top the majors and Frank Robinson and Kaline are tied for the league home run lead with 21.

All starters, except pitchers, must play at least three innings. No pitcher can go more than three, unless the games goes into extra inning.

The game will be carried on national NBC television starting at 2 p.m., EDT.

Players are straggling in from all points on makeshift schedules due to the airplane strike. Special planes are ready if unexpected emergencies develop.

St. Louis expects a capacity crowd of close to 50,000 in new Busch Memorial Stadium and the weather man promises to make it hot.

Potlatch Skids Past Dexter

DEXTER -- Sikeston Potlatch beat the host nine here Saturday night for the second time this season, this time by a 4-1 score.

Rudy Manley hurled a four hitter at the host team, collecting thirteen strikeouts for his third win of the season. Kenny Walker was credited with the loss as he gave up five hits and four runs, collecting eight strikeouts.

Walker had a rather easy first inning, striking out the first two batters, yielding a hit and striking out the fourth batter of the inning. In the Dexter half of the first inning Ayers reached first on an error by the first baseman and White and McCarthy followed with hits scoring Ayers on McCarthy's hit. Walker and Lane struck out for the next two batters of the inning and Kelly ended the inning flying out to the shortstop.

Potlatch bounced back in the second inning scoring two runs on two hits and continued to score in the third and fourth innings while holding Dexter helpless.

A's Take Two, Cards Drop One

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Kansas City barged into sixth place in the American League Sunday, taking both ends of a double header from Cleveland, 4-1 and 5-3.

St. Louis remained in sixth place in the National League although Atlanta picked up a game on the Cards as Houston edged their hosts in Busch Memorial Stadium, 6-5, behind Rusty Staub's two home runs.

The A's took the lead early in both games, scoring four times in the opening frame of the first game and three times in the first game and three times in the first inning of the second.

With two out, Mike Hershberger walked, stole second and scored on a double by Ed Charles. Dick Green followed with a single to score Charles and Joe Nossek slammed an inside the park homer.

Rookie Jim Nash, given the benefit of this cushion, proceeded to set the Indians down on three hits, one of which by Max Alvis, was ruled an inside the park homer in the fifth.

In the second game, the A's collected four hits, including a double by Roger Repoz, for their three runs in the first inning.

The Indians picked up single runs in the third, fourth and fifth innings to tie it before the A's surged ahead again in the sixth on another double by Repoz and Larry Stahl's line single to left.

Kansas City added an insurance run in the seventh when Campy Campaneris beat out a hit to short, stole second and scored on a surprise double by winning pitcher Jack Aker.

Bill Stafford started the second game but gave way to Wes Stock and Jim Duckworth. Aker took over to begin the seventh and earned the victory with three strong innings in which he allowed three hits, struck out two and walked no one.

The Cards took a short live 3-2 lead in the fifth, only to have Houston knot the count in the sixth, moved ahead again in the seventh, 5-3, then yielded as Staub hit his second home run of the game, a two - run shot in the eighth.

Bob Aspromonte scored the winning run on a single, a bobble, and Bob Lillis' single.

St. Louis loaded the bases with none out in the eighth, but Mike Cuellar came on in relief to retire the side without any damage.

Orlando Cepeda and Dal Maxvill had four hits apiece for the Cards. Cepeda's production included his 11th homer of the season.

Both teams will be idle until after the All - Star game Tuesday in St. Louis.

NL Favored To Win 19th All-Star Game

ST. LOUIS, Mo. AP -- Right-hander Dennis McLain of Detroit and southpaw Sandy Koufax of Los Angeles were named today the starting pitchers for Tuesday's All-Star game.

The embarrassed American League, winner of only one of the last nine All-Star baseball games, is ready to go all out Tuesday against the favored National League's impressive array.

The National Leaguers have been taking blows for winning both the World Series and the All-Star Game in each of the last three years. Overcoming a 12-4 edge in the All-Star series once completely dominated by the American League, Willie Mays and Co. have taken the lead 18-17-1.

Sam Mele, the Minnesota skipper who will boss the American League, sounded the word before he left home.

"I'll use my eight starters all the way if it will help us win," said Mele. "I'm going to win this one. We'll play to win."

Walter Alston of the Los Angeles Dodgers can be counted upon to give his sluggers a similar message.

In the old days it was common for most of the pitchers to work the Sunday previous to the game. That no longer is the case.

Five of the 16 pitchers were used Sunday but the only starters were Steve Barber of Baltimore on the American side and Jim Bunning of Philadelphia on the National side. Pete Richert of Washington, Claude Raymond of Houston and Phil Regan of the Los Angeles Dodgers were used in relief.

Regan was a late addition to the staff. He was named by Alston to take the place of Bob Gibson when the St. Louis Cardinal ace came up with a sore elbow. Sam McDowell of Cleveland, who lasted less than an inning Sunday, also bowed out with a sore arm and was replaced by teammate Sonny Siebert.

Sandy Koufax of the Dodgers, the majors' top winner with a 15-4 record, worked Saturday. So did Gaylord Perry of San Francisco and Billy McCool of Cincinnati. Juan Marichal of San Francisco has rested since pitching a three-hitter for his 14th victory Friday. Bob Veale of Pittsburgh has not pitched since Thursday.

Three American League starters worked Saturday - Gary Bell of Cleveland, Catfish Hunter of Kansas City and Denny McLain of Detroit, the league's big winner with a 13-4 record. Jim Kaat of Minnesota and Mel Stottlemyre of New York were used Friday.

Both manager were scheduled to name their pitchers and batting orders at a morning news conference.

Alston, who had been undecided about coming to the game due to the illness of his mother, is expected to be on hand. If he cannot make it, Herman Franks of the league-leading San Francisco Giants will take his place.

All-Stars--Injuries struck the National League starting lineup forcing Alston to replace second baseman Joe Morgan of Houston with switch-hitting Jim Lefebvre of his Dodger club. Morgan suffered a broken knee cap a week ago.

Ron Santo, the Chicago Cubs, third baseman, retained his starting job, wearing a special face guard to protect his injured cheekbone.

The Nationals have the majors' top home run hitter in Hank Aaron of the Atlanta Braves in the outfield along with marvelous Willie Mays of the San Francisco Giants and Roberto Clemente of Pittsburgh.

Willie McCovey of San Francisco at first base, Lefebvre at second, Leo Cardenas of Cincinnati at short, Santo at third and Joe Torre of Atlanta as catcher completed the power-packed starting line-up.

Frank Robinson of Baltimore, anxious to show the Nationals that Cincinnati made a mistake in trading him, will team with Detroit's Al Kaline and Minnesota's Tony Oliva in the American outfield.

Rookie George Scott of Boston at first base, Bobby Knoop of California at second, Dick McAuliffe of Detroit at short, Brooks Robinson of Baltimore at third and Bill Freehan of Detroit as catcher are the other starters.

Brooks Robinson's 70 runs batted in top the majors and Frank Robinson and Kaline are tied for the league home run lead with 21.

All starters, except pitchers, must play at least three innings. No pitcher can go more than three, unless the games goes into extra inning.

The game will be carried on national NBC television starting at 2 p.m., EDT.

Players are straggling in from all points on makeshift schedules due to the airplane strike. Special planes are ready if unexpected emergencies develop.

St. Louis expects a capacity crowd of close to 50,000 in new Busch Memorial Stadium and the weather man promises to make it hot.

Potlatch Skids Past Dexter

DEXTER -- Sikeston Potlatch beat the host nine here Saturday night for the second time this season, this time by a 4-1 score.

Rudy Manley hurled a four hitter at the host team, collecting thirteen strikeouts for his third win of the season. Kenny Walker was credited with the loss as he gave up five hits and four runs, collecting eight strikeouts.

Walker had a rather easy first inning, striking out the first two batters, yielding a hit and striking out the fourth batter of the inning. In the Dexter half of the first inning Ayers reached first on an error by the first baseman and White and McCarthy followed with hits scoring Ayers on McCarthy's hit. Walker and Lane struck out for the next two batters of the inning and Kelly ended the inning flying out to the shortstop.

Potlatch bounced back in the second inning scoring two runs on two hits and continued to score in the third and fourth innings while holding Dexter helpless.

Farmers Eligible to Plant Alternate Crops

BENTON -- Farmers who signed up this year to participate in the cotton, wheat or feed grain programs but who have not been able to plant the crop because of natural disaster are urged to get in touch with the ASCS county office as soon as possible.

Roy Proctor, chairman of Scott county Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Committee, said newly enacted legislation now permits such farmers to obtain program benefits and to plant alternate crops on acreage intended earlier to be planted to one of the three crops. County ASC committees will make prompt arrangements to provide program benefits to farmers who have signed up as participants.

The chairman explained that if the county committee determined that an acreage of cotton, wheat or feed grains was not planted this spring because of flood, drought or other natural disaster, they can consider it as having been planted for the purpose of program eligibility and payments, provided a production-adjustment crop was not subsequently planted there for harvest in the current year. Production-adjustment crops include wheat, feed grains, tobacco, cotton, peanuts, rice, sugar beets, and sugar cane for harvest.

Farm program participants whose crops are lost after planting already had the opportunity to plant alternative crops on such acreage and still qualify for program benefits. Thus, farmers who signed up in the wheat, feed grain or cotton program and planted crops which later were destroyed by natural disaster may plant an alternative crop on the affected acreage and receive the available price-support payments as if the crop had been harvested.

Both provisions are effective for the same crop years -- 1966 through 1969.

THIS HOUSE, built in 1853, is going to be restored. It is one of the older houses in Scott County.

To Restore Old House

One of the older houses in Scott County is going to be restored. Mrs. James Handy Moore of Charleston said Friday.

The house, located near Tanner, was built in 1853 by Ben F. Hunter. In its construction, the lumber used was cut by a method known as whip-sawing, and in place of nails, wooden pegs were used.

The house is about 1 1/2 stories high and about 50 feet long. It has two rooms on the first floor, each room 20 by 20 feet, with a 10-foot breezeway between the rooms. A stairway leads from the breezeway to the upstairs rooms.

The house, when occupied, was heated by large fireplaces at each end of the house. The roof is cypress boards.

The old house was moved from its original site yesterday to a site nearer Route ZZ. Mrs. Moore said a new house would be erected on the original site of the Hunter home. Her husband's grandmother was born in the old house.

Medicare Passes First Week Much Smoother Than Expected

EDITOR'S NOTE -- Members of The Associated Press task force, who reported on the initial impact of medicare when it went into effect July 1, have kept a watch on hospitals in major cities during the program's first week. This is their report.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

After the first week of medicare, the nation's hospitals generally report they have much more paperwork but not many more patients.

A survey in 12 maor cities indicates that the number of 65-and-over patients entering hospitals has been mostly normal since the program of hospital insurance under Social Security went into effect July 1. Only Atlanta, with a 10 per cent gain, reported a significant increase.

"After all it's still the doctor who says when a patient should be admitted to a hospital," said Dr. Robert M. Hazen of Kansas City, advancing one reason for medicare's calm start.

Others given by hospital administrators included the availability of private medical insurance and other public health care, and the fact that medicare went into effect in summer, a normally slow time for hospitals.

In New York, said Dr. S. David Pomrinse, assistant director of Mt. Sinai Hospital, the city "has long made it a practice to give medical care to all people. The payoff is that we don't have any greater demand now than before."

The hospital's director of admissions, Nat Louis, said: "The urgency, the scare has passed. Anything that comes now is simply a matter of procedure and that can be worked out. Our only impact here is paper."

That was the major impact also at Jackson Memorial Hospital in Miami, where head clerk Barbara Maton said her dozen helpers are "up to here in forms, perforated tape and problems."

Some hospital people warned that the future course of medicare may not run as smoothly as the past week.

John Brewer, chairman of the Southern California Council of Hospitals, pointed out that in Los Angeles fall is a more popular time than summer for elective surgery.

"This is going to be a gradual thing, not a sudden one," he predicted, reporting that only cataract operations have increased in his area since July 1.

The real impact of medicare lies in the future, said Sister Mary James, administrator of Hotel Dieu House of God, a New Orleans hospital.

"I have been told that the people now over 65 are people who always have avoided doctors or hospitals whenever possible and that the real medicare load will come when younger people reach the age of 65," she said. "I think there is some truth in this."

Those among the nation's 19 million persons 65 and over who have taken advantage of medicare so far had high priase for the program.

"If I didn't have it, I wouldn't be here," said Valentine Kuffel, 79, from his bed in St. Elizabeth's Hospital in Chicago. He was admitted July 4 for surgery.

"Of course I'm happy," said Vincent Locasio, 75 a retired carpenter, at Research Medical Center in Kansas City. "Why shouldn't I be? A lot of people have nothing to go on. This was necessary."

Not all patients admitted under medicare cannot afford private care. At Miami's Jackson Memorial Hospital, Raymond S. Perrine, 66, a former Pennsylvania coal magnate, was admitted after he got back from a world cruise last month. He found trouble developing with his Pacemaker, an instrument that keeps his heart beating.

"I thought if I could go a few more days, I could get in under medicare," said Perrine, who now lives in Bradenton, Fla. "so I negotiated with the doctor and was admitted July 2 and operated on July 3.

Perrine was happy to discover that medicare covered the cost of the Pacemaker, a delicate electronic battery inserted in a patient's body. He had deposited $500 to cover its cost but was told he would get the money back.

"I'm glad to hear it," he said. "I don't ever disregard the value of a dollar."

THIS HOUSE, built in 1853, is going to be restored. It is one of the older houses in Scott County.

To Restore Old House

One of the older houses in Scott County is going to be restored. Mrs. James Handy Moore of Charleston said Friday.

The house, located near Tanner, was built in 1853 by Ben F. Hunter. In its construction, the lumber used was cut by a method known as whip-sawing, and in place of nails, wooden pegs were used.

The house is about 1 1/2 stories high and about 50 feet long. It has two rooms on the first floor, each room 20 by 20 feet, with a 10-foot breezeway between the rooms. A stairway leads from the breezeway to the upstairs rooms.

The house, when occupied, was heated by large fireplaces at each end of the house. The roof is cypress boards.

The old house was moved from its original site yesterday to a site nearer Route ZZ. Mrs. Moore said a new house would be erected on the original site of the Hunter home. Her husband's grandmother was born in the old house.

Medicare Passes First Week Much Smoother Than Expected

EDITOR'S NOTE -- Members of The Associated Press task force, who reported on the initial impact of medicare when it went into effect July 1, have kept a watch on hospitals in major cities during the program's first week. This is their report.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

After the first week of medicare, the nation's hospitals generally report they have much more paperwork but not many more patients.

A survey in 12 maor cities indicates that the number of 65-and-over patients entering hospitals has been mostly normal since the program of hospital insurance under Social Security went into effect July 1. Only Atlanta, with a 10 per cent gain, reported a significant increase.

"After all it's still the doctor who says when a patient should be admitted to a hospital," said Dr. Robert M. Hazen of Kansas City, advancing one reason for medicare's calm start.

Others given by hospital administrators included the availability of private medical insurance and other public health care, and the fact that medicare went into effect in summer, a normally slow time for hospitals.

In New York, said Dr. S. David Pomrinse, assistant director of Mt. Sinai Hospital, the city "has long made it a practice to give medical care to all people. The payoff is that we don't have any greater demand now than before."

The hospital's director of admissions, Nat Louis, said: "The urgency, the scare has passed. Anything that comes now is simply a matter of procedure and that can be worked out. Our only impact here is paper."

That was the major impact also at Jackson Memorial Hospital in Miami, where head clerk Barbara Maton said her dozen helpers are "up to here in forms, perforated tape and problems."

Some hospital people warned that the future course of medicare may not run as smoothly as the past week.

John Brewer, chairman of the Southern California Council of Hospitals, pointed out that in Los Angeles fall is a more popular time than summer for elective surgery.

"This is going to be a gradual thing, not a sudden one," he predicted, reporting that only cataract operations have increased in his area since July 1.

The real impact of medicare lies in the future, said Sister Mary James, administrator of Hotel Dieu House of God, a New Orleans hospital.

"I have been told that the people now over 65 are people who always have avoided doctors or hospitals whenever possible and that the real medicare load will come when younger people reach the age of 65," she said. "I think there is some truth in this."

Those among the nation's 19 million persons 65 and over who have taken advantage of medicare so far had high priase for the program.

"If I didn't have it, I wouldn't be here," said Valentine Kuffel, 79, from his bed in St. Elizabeth's Hospital in Chicago. He was admitted July 4 for surgery.

"Of course I'm happy," said Vincent Locasio, 75 a retired carpenter, at Research Medical Center in Kansas City. "Why shouldn't I be? A lot of people have nothing to go on. This was necessary."

Not all patients admitted under medicare cannot afford private care. At Miami's Jackson Memorial Hospital, Raymond S. Perrine, 66, a former Pennsylvania coal magnate, was admitted after he got back from a world cruise last month. He found trouble developing with his Pacemaker, an instrument that keeps his heart beating.

"I thought if I could go a few more days, I could get in under medicare," said Perrine, who now lives in Bradenton, Fla. "so I negotiated with the doctor and was admitted July 2 and operated on July 3.

Perrine was happy to discover that medicare covered the cost of the Pacemaker, a delicate electronic battery inserted in a patient's body. He had deposited $500 to cover its cost but was told he would get the money back.

"I'm glad to hear it," he said. "I don't ever disregard the value of a dollar."

State Highway Commission Issues Call For Bids July 28 Totaling $14,750,000

The Missouri State Highway Commission has issued a call for bids July 28 for highway construction and improvements estimated to cost $14,750,000 on about 60 miles of the state's highways extending into 20 counties and the cities of Jefferson City, Springfield, Poplar Bluff and Dexter.

The call covers about 28 1/2 miles of Interstate system work estimated at $8,000,000 and another 14 1/2 miles of Supplementary (farm to market) system projects estimated at $1,750,000.

Connections to present U. S. 54 at both the north and south ends and Bagnell Dam will be made. The remainder of the paving will be done at a later date. Twin bridges over Blue Springs Creek are also included.

Bootheel To Be Warmer

Bootheel residents can look forward to warmer than normal July temperatures and near normal rainfall this month. This will call for some irrigation, much air conditioning, and frequent trips to nearby water resorts.

Low pressure centers are not generally active in the mid-south in this summer month. Except for years when tropical storms change the pattern, moisture spreading northward from the Gulf of Mexico is acted upon by mid-summer heat to stir up scattered thundershower activity. An increase in such activity along the Gulf Coast region is expected to produce heavy rains from Texas to the Carolinas and Florida. Enough moisture will penetrate into Arkansas and Southeast Missouri to provide near normal rainfall for July 1966.

Normal July precipitation for the Bootheel as a whole is 3.22 inches. Normals for individual cities are:

Caruthersville 3.56 inches; Fisk 3.29 inches; New Madrid 3.79 inches; Poplar Bluff 3.33 inches; Dexter 3.22 inches; Morehouse 2.86 inches; Parma 3.45 inches; Sikeston 3.12 inches.

Short term averages for other Bootheel locations:

Charleston 3.26 inches; Malden 3.52 inches; Portageville 3.14 inches; Kennett 3.18 inches.

These amounts of rain fall far short of crop demand in normal years. Where moisture is available, plants will generally use over three inches more water than is provided by showers. Following a dry June in which some sub-soil moisture reserves were used, this will mean moisture stresses for corn and cotton, particularly on sandy soils. June rainfall for Bootheel Weather Bureau stations was:

Cairo 2.94 inches; Charleston 2.15 inches; Malden 1.98 inches; Caruthersville 0.92 inches; Sikeston 4.43 Inches; Poplar Bluff 1.55 inches; Kennett 2.78 inches; Portageville 1.40 inches.

Early reports from our Bootheel raingage network showed 2.10 inches at M. E. Allens Farm at Puxico, 1.40 inches at the Dolphin Gin, Steele and at the Crews Reynolds Gin at Caruthersville.

Corn is already using large daily amounts of water and has had several irrigations on some farms. Cotton demands will increase now that warm nights have increased growth, particularly as fruiting becomes heavy later in the month. Usually we can expect rain on 9 to 11 days of the month, and amounts will vary considerably in thundershowers. Daily and five day weather outlooks will be particularly useful in scheduling harvest of hay, peaches and watermelons since they point out expected intervals between wet periods.

Daytime temperatures will rise into the 90s on most days of the month. Readings above the 100 degree mark have not been common in recent years. However, with above normal heat in the Bootheel, Kennett had 16 days of 100 degrees or higher in 1954. That included 16 of the first 19 days of a sweltering month. Malden had 12 such days in that year and Portageville 11.

Cattle feed better where shade and water are plentiful during prolonged hot spells. Potato growers will want to watch temperatures during harvest to prevent heat damage to freshly dug tubers. Some farmers discontinue harvest when temperatures rise above 85 degrees.

Mites tend to increase in cotton during hot, dry weather. Humans have hot weather problems too. We can expect to spend more on electrical power to run air conditioners. An increase in water sports calls for reminders to guard against excessive exposure to sun, and to leave the water promptly at the earliest signs of approaching electrical storms. Thunderstorms are also a hazard to the fisherman and the golfer.

Gunmen Get $10,000 In Independence Holdup

INDEPENDENCE, Mo. AP -- Two gunmen robbed two store employes of an estimated $10,000 Friday at Cascio's Food Mart on U. S. 40.

The employes, Peter J. Donnici, 23, assistant manager, and Jerry Beisly, 17, had just returned from a bank with money for cashing weekend checks.

Donnici said three men in a car stopped behind his car at the rear of the store. Two men got out.

"When I saw the men were wearing stocking caps over their faces I knew it was a holdup," Donnici said.

He and Beisly were forced to walk away while the men grabbed the money and drove off.

The bandits' car was found 30 minutes later. The license had been reported stolen.

Union Electric Plans $140 Million Plant

ST. LOUIS AP -- Union Electric Co. announced plans today for construction of a $140 million steam power plant on the Missouri River near Labadie in Franklin County.

The two-unit plant is expected to begin operation early in 1970.

The company is building a 1,050,000 kilowat unit at Portage des Sioux on the Mississippi River in St. Charles County.

"Every telephone pole we pass reminds me of the little dog I used to take for a walk each evening before he died," said one of the two strollers.

"Trees, too, I suppose?"

Bootheel To Be Warmer

Bootheel residents can look forward to warmer than normal July temperatures and near normal rainfall this month. This will call for some irrigation, much air conditioning, and frequent trips to nearby water resorts.

Low pressure centers are not generally active in the mid-south in this summer month. Except for years when tropical storms change the pattern, moisture spreading northward from the Gulf of Mexico is acted upon by mid-summer heat to stir up scattered thundershower activity. An increase in such activity along the Gulf Coast region is expected to produce heavy rains from Texas to the Carolinas and Florida. Enough moisture will penetrate into Arkansas and Southeast Missouri to provide near normal rainfall for July 1966.

Normal July precipitation for the Bootheel as a whole is 3.22 inches. Normals for individual cities are:

Caruthersville 3.56 inches; Fisk 3.29 inches; New Madrid 3.79 inches; Poplar Bluff 3.33 inches; Dexter 3.22 inches; Morehouse 2.86 inches; Parma 3.45 inches; Sikeston 3.12 inches.

Short term averages for other Bootheel locations:

Charleston 3.26 inches; Malden 3.52 inches; Portageville 3.14 inches; Kennett 3.18 inches.

These amounts of rain fall far short of crop demand in normal years. Where moisture is available, plants will generally use over three inches more water than is provided by showers. Following a dry June in which some sub-soil moisture reserves were used, this will mean moisture stresses for corn and cotton, particularly on sandy soils. June rainfall for Bootheel Weather Bureau stations was:

Cairo 2.94 inches; Charleston 2.15 inches; Malden 1.98 inches; Caruthersville 0.92 inches; Sikeston 4.43 inches; Poplar Bluff 1.55 inches; Kennett 2.78 inches; Portageville 1.40 inches.

Early reports from our Bootheel raingage network showed 2.10 inches at M. E. Allens Farm at Puxico, 1.40 inches at the Dolphin Gin, Steele and at the Crews Reynolds Gin at Caruthersville.

Corn is already using large daily amounts of water and has had several irrigations on some farms. Cotton demands will increase now that warm nights have increased growth, particularly as fruiting becomes heavy later in the month. Usually we can expect rain on 9 to 11 days of the month, and amounts will vary considerably in thundershowers. Daily and five day weather outlooks will be particularly useful in scheduling harvest of hay, peaches and watermelons since they point out expected intervals between wet periods.

Daytime temperatures will rise into the 90s on most days of the month. Readings above the 100 degree mark have not been common in recent years. However, with above normal heat in the Bootheel, Kennett had 16 days of 100 degrees or higher in 1954. That included 16 of the first 19 days of a sweltering month. Malden had 12 such days in that year and Portageville 11.

Cattle feed better where shade and water are plentiful during prolonged hot spells. Potato growers will want to watch temperatures during harvest to prevent heat damage to freshly dug tubers. Some farmers discontinue harvest when temperatures rise above 85 degrees.

Mites tend to increase in cotton during hot, dry weather. Humans have hot weather problems too. We can expect to spend more on electrical power to run air conditioners. An increase in water sports calls for reminders to guard against excessive exposure to sun, and to leave the water promptly at the earliest signs of approaching electrical storms. Thunderstorms are also a hazard to the fisherman and the golfer.

THE CITY OF SIKESTON, MO.
Resolution

A resolution declaring the necessity for the construction of 1 1/2" hotmix asphaltic pavement on 6" soil cement base with concrete curb and gutter on Frisco Street from Ruth Street to Dorothy Street extended in accordance with plans & specifications in the City of Sikeston, Missouri; stating the nature of the improvement; the estimated cost and providing that payment for all of the improvement shall be made by special tax bills levied and assessed against the abutting property. Be it resolved by the Council of the City of Sikeston, State of Missouri, as follows: SECTION 1: That the Council of the City of Sikeston, Missouri, deems and declares the construction of said Street necessary to the welfare and improvement of the City of Sikeston. SECTION 2: That the nature and scope of the improvement shall consist of furnishing all cost, including labor, materials and transportation necessary for the complete construction of the improvement. SECTION 3: That the estimated cost of the improvement is $4.50 per lineal foot of abutting property, to be charged against the lots and tracts of land abutting the improvement. SECTION 4: That payment for all of the improvement shall be made by special tax bills evidencing special assessments against the abutting property in the manner specified by the statutes of the State of Missouri and the ordinances of the City of Sikeston, Missouri, because in the opinion of the City Council the General Revenue fund of the City of Sikeston is not in a condition to warrant an expenditure therefrom to pay for the improvement. SECTION 5: That any work performed on construction of the improvement shall be in compliance with the provisions of the prevailing wage laws of the State of Missouri, such prevailing wage rates having been established by the Industrial Commission of Missouri. SECTION 6: That the City Clerk is hereby authorized and directed to furnish a copy of this Resolution to a daily newspaper of general circulation in the City of Sikeston, so that it shall be published for seven consecutive insertions. Read the first, second and third times and passed and approved this 5th day of July, 1966. Approved: Kendall Sikes, Mayor; Attest: John W. Vaughn, City Clerk.

Can we all be FRIENDLIER? Isn't it an idea to, each day, think of this: "LET'S MAKE SIKESTON THE FRIENDLIEST CITY IN MISSOURI. Bear in mind: the person whom you don't know may be just passing through -- may be "looking our town over" with the idea of "locating here" -- regardless, you will give that person "his or her impression" of our city.

Gunmen Get $10,000 In Independence Holdup

INDEPENDENCE, Mo. AP -- Two gunmen robbed two store employes of an estimated $10,000 Friday at Cascio's Food Mart on U. S. 40.

The employes, Peter J. Donnici, 23, assistant manager, and Jerry Beisly, 17, had just returned from a bank with money for cashing weekend checks.

Donnici said three men in a car stopped behind his car at the rear of the store. Two men got out.

"When I saw the men were wearing stocking caps over their faces I knew it was a holdup," Donnici said.

He and Beisly were forced to walk away while the men grabbed the money and drove off.

The bandits' car was found 30 minutes later. The license had been reported stolen.

Union Electric Plans $140 Million Plant

ST. LOUIS AP -- Union Electric Co. announced plans today for construction of a $140 million steam power plant on the Missouri River near Labadie in Franklin County.

The two-unit plant is expected to begin operation early in 1970.

The company is building a 1,050,000 kilowat unit at Portage des Sioux on the Mississippi River in St. Charles County.

"Every telephone pole we pass reminds me of the little dog I used to take for a walk each evening before he died," said one of the two strollers.

"Trees, too, I suppose?"

"No, no -- not trees. Trees still have their bark."

Mr. and Mrs. David Gay of Lexington, Ky., are moving to a farm belonging to E.P. Coleman near Oran. Mr. Gay is a nephew of Mr. Coleman.

Monday afternoon Mrs. Edward Calvin Matthews, jr., daughter-in-law of Mrs. E. C. Matthews, 305 North Kingshighway, was introduced by Mrs. Matthews to friends and relatives at the Sikeston Country Club.

Mrs. M. L. Canedy entertained with a theatre party on Wednesday afternoon for her daughter, Sara Sue, who that day celebrated her birth anniversary. The following guests were present: Carolyn Crenshaw, Marva Bratton, Nancy Bowman, Glenna Childers, Jan Martin, Ina Claire Dozier, Carol Jean Joyner, Linda Woods, Sally Webb, Normie Woods, Sonny Cowell, Larry Canoy, Roy Carter, Jerry Lax, Don Allen, Bill Lathom, Bing Limbaugh, Johnny Shoemaker and Donny Webb.

Mr. and Mrs. Hansel Duncan and son were delightfully surprised Sunday when a number of friends and relatives gathered at their home to help celebrate their fifth wedding anniversary.

When Bob Hope's troupe entertained servicemen on the deck of a big cruiser in the Pacific, Jerry Colonna pretended to be one of the sailors on the vessel. "What's your job?" Hope demanded. "I polish the brass," explained Colonna. "I've got the shiniest captain in the fleet."

ANN LANDERS
Answers Your Problems

Dear Ann Landers: I have been married to Lee (made-up name) for nine years. We have four children and a nice home in the suburbs. Lee is a good husband and father and we have a happy marriage.

Tonight, by accident, I ran across some cigaret paper for rolling your own. It was tucked in the back of Lee's desk drawer along with an envelope that had been taped and stapled. I opened the envelope and found some dried particles of what appeared to be a plant. It is dark brown in color and has some tiny seeds mixed in. Can this be marijuana?

I have not told my husband that I found the envelope and I don't know if I should. Please tell me what you know about marijuana and what I ought to do about it.--FRIGHTENED

Dear Frightened: Obviously, I could not attempt to analyze any substance without first seeing it, and in this instance, even if I saw it I wouldn't be of much help. I don't know what marijuana looks like.

If you take the contents of the envelope to an organic chemist for analysis and if it turns out to be marijuana, prepare yourself for questioning by legal authorities. Possession of marijuana is against the law.

It seems inlikely to me that your husband could be on pot and you would not know it. This weed produces exhilaration which you would surely recognize as universal behavior. Discuss the problem with your family doctor and accept his counsel

Dear Ann Landers: Who is right? My husband's sister has two children who are in grammar school. Her son had a tenth birthday several days ago and my husband and I sent the youngster a very nice gift.

Yesterday we received a handwritten letter to "my dear Unkle and Ant" thanking us for the "beautiful presunt." The stationery was folded in a sloppy, haphazard manner and the envelope looked as if he had carried it in his pocket for a week.

I showed the letter to my husband and he said he thought it was "fine" that the kid took the time and trouble to write a thank you letter. I said it was the very least the boy could do. I also said I thought his mother should have looked at the letter before he sent it, and corrected his spelling and instructed him to write it over. Do you agree with me?--OLD WORLD THINKER

Dear Thinker: No, I do not agree with you. The child's note was an expression of appreciation. He thanked you in his own words--in his own way. For a 10-year-old, "Unkle and Ant" isn't too bad. You should see the letters I get from high school kids complaining about "kerfew" and not enough "freedum."

Dear Ann Landers: I am a 15-year-old girl who is heartbroken. I went with Bart for six months. I knew the minute I laid eyes on him that he was very mixed up. I was his psychiatrist, his mother figure, his sweetheart and his parole officer. I was also his banker. He still owes me $9.00.

After I gave him everything he wanted he told me that I was too bossy and then he dropped me for another girl. He needs me but he doesn't know it. Please tell me how to get the message across to him. --LINDA

Dear Linda: Never mind about getting the message across to him. Concentrate on the message he got across to you. You need this fellow like Custer needed more Indians. Consider yourself lucky to be rid of the guy.

When necking becomes petting, watch out! To learn how the smart girl keeps both her dignity and her boy friend, send for Ann Landers' booklet, "Necking and Petting--And How Far To Go." enclosing with your request 25¢ in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

ONE FLAG FOR ALL!

AN EDITORIAL

1966 looks upon a world filled with maniacal international politicians jockeying for power. The effects reach into every home in the land . . . pressuring emotions with endless strain. The thought occurs to us how tragic it would be if some misguided nation misread the meanings of the marches and counter marches the picketings and counter picketings of small groups of protesters who have big mouths and small support from the rank and file citizenry who make up 95% of our population. There always have been little "exception groups" in America. There is an opposite side to every belief, conviction and ideal in our nation. Yet the Spirit of '76 remains as strong in the hearts of most Americans as it was when it was born 190 years ago.

Differences of opinion among Americans have been underlined by strong public stands of splinter groups since the end of World War II. Throughout these demonstrations the 95% majority who disagreed with each other in many areas were never far apart on the main issue: the unity of our republic is inviolable.

As the important national holidays roll around again for the 190th time, the time comes to show the colors on every home as a testimonial to our national unity and love of country. Every American should join this host of flag flyers. Get a home flag set now. Fly it on your home on Armed Forces Day, Decoration Day, Flag Day, Independence Day, Veterans Day and on Lincoln's and Washington's Birthdays, too . . . and on the fifteen important national holidays on which the flags should fly. Get a flag. Any U.S. Flag. Anywhere. But fly it. Make this a must on your list of things to do. Show the children how to raise it in the morning and take it down at twilight. This is the American way . . . and should be preserved forever as a national tradition.

The following guests were present: Carolyn Crenshaw, Marva Bratton, Nancy Bowman, Glenna Childers, Jan Martin, Ina Claire Dozier, Carol Jean Joyner, Linda Woods, Sally Webb, Normie Woods, Sonny Cowell, Larry Canoy, Roy Carter, Jerry Lax, Don Allen, Bill Lathom, Bing Limbaugh, Johnny Shoemaker and Donny Webb.

Mr. and Mrs. Hansel Duncan and son were delightfully surprised Sunday when a number of friends and relatives gathered at their home to help celebrate their fifth wedding anniversary.

When Bob Hope's troupe entertained servicemen on the deck of a big cruiser in the Pacific, Jerry Colonna pretended to be one of the sailors on the vessel. "What's your job?" Hope demanded. "I polish the brass," explained Colonna. "I've got the shiniest captain in the fleet."

ANN LANDERS
Answers Your Problems

Dear Ann Landers: I have been married to Lee (made-up name) for nine years. We have four children and a nice home in the suburbs. Lee is a good husband and father and we have a happy marriage.

Tonight, by accident, I ran across some cigaret paper for rolling your own. It was tucked in the back of Lee's desk drawer along with an envelope that had been taped and stapled. I opened the envelope and found some dried particles of what appeared to be a plant. It is dark brown in color and has some tiny seeds mixed in. Can this be marijuana?

I have not told my husband that I found the envelope and I don't know if I should. Please tell me what you know about marijuana and what I ought to do about it.--FRIGHTENED

Dear Frightened: Obviously, I could not attempt to analyze any substance without first seeing it, and in this instance, even if I saw it I wouldn't be of much help. I don't know what marijuana looks like.

If you take the contents of the envelope to an organic chemist for analysis and if it turns out to be marijuana, prepare yourself for questioning by legal authorities. Possession of marijuana is against the law.

It seems inlikely to me that your husband could be on pot and you would not know it. This weed produces exhilaration which you would surely recognize as universal behavior. Discuss the problem with your family doctor and accept his counsel

Dear Ann Landers: Who is right? My husband's sister has two children who are in grammar school. Her son had a tenth birthday several days ago and my husband and I sent the youngster a very nice gift.

Yesterday we received a handwritten letter to "my dear Unkle and Ant" thanking us for the "beautiful presunt." The stationery was folded in a sloppy, haphazard manner and the envelope looked as if he had carried it in his pocket for a week.

I showed the letter to my husband and he said he thought it was "fine" that the kid took the time and trouble to write a thank you letter. I said it was the very least the boy could do. I also said I thought his mother should have looked at the letter before he sent it, and corrected his spelling and instructed him to write it over. Do you agree with me?--OLD WORLD THINKER

Dear Thinker: No, I do not agree with you. The child's note was an expression of appreciation. He thanked you in his own words--in his own way. For a 10-year-old, "Unkle and Ant" isn't too bad. You should see the letters I get from high school kids complaining about "kerfew" and not enough "freedum."

Dear Ann Landers: I am a 15-year-old girl who is heartbroken. I went with Bart for six months. I knew the minute I laid eyes on him that he was very mixed up. I was his psychiatrist, his mother figure, his sweetheart and his parole officer. I was also his banker. He still owes me $9.00.

After I gave him everything he wanted he told me that I was too bossy and then he dropped me for another girl. He needs me but he doesn't know it. Please tell me how to get the message across to him. --LINDA

Dear Linda: Never mind about getting the message across to him. Concentrate on the message he got across to you. You need this fellow like Custer needed more Indians. Consider yourself lucky to be rid of the guy.

When necking becomes petting, watch out! To learn how the smart girl keeps both her dignity and her boy friend, send for Ann Landers' booklet, "Necking and Petting--And How Far To Go." enclosing with your request 25¢ in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

ONE FLAG FOR ALL!

AN EDITORIAL

1966 looks upon a world filled with maniacal international politicians jockeying for power. The effects reach into every home in the land . . . pressuring emotions with endless strain. The thought occurs to us how tragic it would be if some misguided nation misread the meanings of the marches and counter marches the picketings and counter picketings of small groups of protesters who have big mouths and small support from the rank and file citizenry who make up 95% of our population. There always have been little "exception groups" in America. There is an opposite side to every belief, conviction and ideal in our nation. Yet the Spirit of '76 remains as strong in the hearts of most Americans as it was when it was born 190 years ago.

Differences of opinion among Americans have been underlined by strong public stands of splinter groups since the end of World War II. Throughout these demonstrations the 95% majority who disagreed with each other in many areas were never far apart on the main issue: the unity of our republic is inviolable.

As the important national holidays roll around again for the 190th time, the time comes to show the colors on every home as a testimonial to our national unity and love of country. Every American should join this host of flag flyers. Get a home flag set now. Fly it on your home on Armed Forces Day, Decoration Day, Flag Day, Independence Day, Veterans Day and on Lincoln's and Washington's Birthdays, too . . . and on the fifteen important national holidays on which the flags should fly. Get a flag. Any U.S. Flag. Anywhere. But fly it. Make this a must on your list of things to do. Show the children how to raise it in the morning and take it down at twilight. This is the American way . . . and should be preserved forever as a national tradition.

Today In U. S. History

Today is Monday, July 11, the 192nd day of 1966. There are 173 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1804, two revolutionary war leaders, Aaron Burr and Alexander Hamilton, met in a pistol duel in Weehawken, N.J. Two shots were fired and Hamilton fell, mortally wounded.

On this date

In 1767, our sixth president, John Quincy Adams, was born.

In 1810, Holland was annexed to the Napoleonic empire.

In 1814, a British fleet captured the town of Eastport, Maine.

In 1937, American composer George Gershwin died.

In 1950, General Dwight D. Eisenhower was nominated for president on the first ballot at the Republican National Convention in Chicago.

Ten years ago—The French government approved the plan for Euratom—an atomic energy commission composed of representatives of the six Common Market nations.

Five years ago—A United Air Lines DC8 jetliner careened off the runway at Denver airport, hit a truck and caught fire. Seventeen persons aboard the plane and a man in the truck died.

One year ago — President Johnson issued a report on the effect of the 1964 civil rights act during its first year. He said the letter of the law had been complied with, but added: "The next step is to achieve compliance in spirit."

"SCALDED AND COCKED"

My grandfather served in the Indianan Infantry in the internal struggle to preserve that nation. My brother went over with the 1st division and shortly after I enlisted in the U. S. Navy for four years.

In World War II my oldest sons served in the conflict. My son, after this served in the Korean dual.

My two younger sons served their time in the Air Corps, and the Spanish American Veterans State. We were all volunteers. I hereby wish to state that I was a volunteer in the Sea Bees in World War II and that I was sworn in and never called and I must still be on the rolls. After this introduction I wish to state this fact.

I am past the three score and 10 and I still would like to walk the streets and drive the highways as a free man.

And I wish to state that regardless of his nationality, his place of call or whether he is a teenager, that I will protect myself or any persons that might be with me and I will not ask any questions for I feel that I should be allowed to walk the streets of any town or city in this "Land of the Free."

J. C. May

(ATLANTA) -- JEST FOR TODAY.

ON a transoceanic flight a passenger was carrying on a conversation with the stewardess with the obvious purpose of impressing his fellow passengers with his English.

He asked the stewardess: "How high is this plane?"

She answered, "29,000 feet."

He nodded solemnly, thought for a moment, then called the stewardess again and asked, "How wide is it?"

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1804, two revolutionary war leaders, Aaron Burr and Alexander Hamilton, met in a pistol duel in Weehawken, N.J. Two shots were fired and Hamilton fell, mortally wounded.

On this date

In 1767, our sixth president, John Quincy Adams, was born.

"SCALDED AND COCKED"

My grandfather served in the Indianan Infantry in the internal struggle to preserve that nation. My brother went over with the 1st division and shortly after I enlisted in the U. S. Navy for four years.

In World War II my oldest sons served in the conflict. My son, after this served in the Korean dual.

My two younger sons served their time in the Air Corps, and the Spanish American Veterans State. We were all volunteers. I hereby wish to state that I was a volunteer in the Sea Bees in World War II and that I was sworn in and never called and I must still be on the rolls. After this introduction I wish to state this fact.

I am past the three score and 10 and I still would like to walk the streets and drive the highways as a free man.

And I wish to state that regardless of his nationality, his place of call or whether he is a teenager, that I will protect myself or any persons that might be with me and I will not ask any questions for I feel that I should be allowed to walk the streets of any town or city in this "Land of the Free."

(ATLANTA) -- JEST FOR TODAY.

ON a transoceanic flight a passenger was carrying on a conversation with the stewardess with the obvious purpose of impressing his fellow passengers with his English.

He asked the stewardess: "How high is this plane?"

She answered, "29,000 feet."

He nodded solemnly, thought for a moment, then called the stewardess again and asked, "How wide is it?"

James Archer Returns From Vietnam

by CAROL MILLER

After completing a year's tour of duty in South Vietnam, Major James H. Archer is home with his family in Sikeston. He is a member of the famous Green Berets, a unit of special volunteer forces which are trained in many areas of military knowledge.

"These special forces were sent to Vietnam in 1961 as advisors to the South Vietnamese. They are responsible for training and equipping the Civilian Irregular Defense Group which is similar to a home guard. Detachments are stationed all over South Vietnam," said Major Archer.

On his last assignment, Major Archer was executive officer for a special (C) detachment which was one of four in Vietnam. It was located at Bien Hoa about 30 miles north of Saigon.

During his 16 years in the service, Major Archer has been stationed at various points within the United States and spent three years in Germany. Since last July when he left for Vietnam his family--wife, Jane, and daughters, Melissa, Susan, Laura, and Jane--has lived in Sikeston.

This was Major Archer's second tour of duty in Vietnam in the special forces which he joined in 1962. During his first tour in 1964, he commanded a 12 man (A) detachment and was slightly wounded. At this time his family was staying at Fort Brad, North Carolina.

On both trips over he made only two stops--one in California and the other at Okinawa.

Major Archer attended language school to learn the Vietnamese language which helped him become acquainted with the people of Vietnam. He stated, "I like the Vietnamese people very much. They are good people." At some later time Major Archer would like to visit Vietnam and his many friends there with his family.

He continued to say that there was no comparison between the culture of the United States and that of the Vietnamese. "Their customs, food, standard of living, and economy are different from ours. They also do not have near the luxuries that the United States does."

One similarity between Sikeston and Vietnam that Major Archer mentioned was the hot, humid climate.

However, he said that it does rain in Vietnam. From May to September the summer monsoons from the Pacific plague the southern delta area with heavy rains; then from September to March the weather shifts and the moonsoons hit the northern part of the country.

At the end of July when his leave is over, Major Archer and his family will report to Fort Leavenworth, Kansas.

Pea Pickin' May Replace Cotton Pickin' in Bootheel

Pea pickers, corn huskers and peachpluckers likely will invade the cotton-pickin' Missouri Delta Area in southeast Missouri as a result of a recent feasibility study.

The study, "The Economic Feasibility of Commercial Fruit and Vegetable Production and Processing in The Missouri Delta," was instigated to determine the economic feasibility of producing fruits and vegetables and the practicality of establishing one or more processing plants in the traditionally cotton-growing areas.

The report wad made by the University of Missouri Agricultural Experiment Station in cooperation with the Economic Research Service, U. S. Department of Agriculture as a result of a request for technical assistance by the Missouri Division of Commerce and Industrial Development.

The Economic Development Administration, U. S. Department of Commerce, provided a substantial share of costs for conducting the study engineered by Prof. Tom Brown, Agricultural Economics, University of Missouri, and James L. Pearson, Economic Research Service, USDA, University of Fla.

The study cites the seven-county Missouri Delta for its abundance of level productive land, unlimited water for irrigation and large, well-financed farm units, all of which provide the needed resources for vegetable production.

The authors point out that production and processing of vegetables are economically feasible.

Cotton acreage has declined 20 percent in the Delta since 1950 and rapid adoption of mechanical cotton pickers has greatly reduced the labor required on remaining cotton acreage; consequently, fewer jobs are available in the area, particularly for seasonal day labor.

Findings indicate that production of vegetable raw materials would increase net and gross farm income of the area by almost $75,000 and $395,000 respectively.

The analysis reveals that seasonal day laborers currently underemployed on farms in the area would be able to work an additional 102,000 hours in the production of vegetable crops. This would, according to the study, increase their income $61,200 annually.

Researchers brought together data from various informational sources relative to the production, processing and marketing of fruits and vegetables. Based on this information, a group of products was selected for further analysis of economic feasibility of production and processing.

In a processing plant analysis, specifications for a freezing plant and canning plant were developed. Buildings, equipment and variable input requirements were obtained in detail. Costs and returns for annual operation of each plant were computed. Resultant profits, after deduction of corporate income taxes, provided the necessary measurements of processing feasibility.

Fruits and vegetables have been grown in the Delta for several years. Production generally has been limited to the fresh market, though some producers have grown products for processors. No fruit and vegetable processing facilities presently are located in the area.

A group of interested farmers and businessmen in southeast Missouri is actively seeking processors interested in the Delta.

The growing number of program participators have enlisted temporary services of the Missouri Delta Development Corporation, Portageville, until a permanent organization of farmers can be established.

The seven counties form a fairly homogeneous economic area in terms of soil, cropping patterns and socio-economic features. Farm land in the area totals 2, 119,000 acres, 83 percent in cropland.

Soils of the area are alluvial, having been formed by the Mississippi, Ohio and St. Francis Rivers. Approximately 50 percent of the soil is fine sandy loam, the other half ranging from light blow sand to heavy gumbo clays. The entire area is underlain with water for irrigation at depths of less than 60 feet.

Stoddard County Farmers Sell $23 Million in Products

By O. C. MILLER
OZARK NEWS BUREAU

WASHINGTON, D. C. -- Farmers of Stoddard county sell $23,361,601 worth of their products a year, a preliminary report of the recent Census of Agriculture showed.

This is about $11,491 per farm, or an increase of $3,000 per farm over the earnings reported by the previous Census of Agriculture. Field crops accounted for more than $19 million of the products while livestock, and livestock products, including poultry and dairy products, accounted for the remainder.

The census disclosed that 113 farms in Stoddard county sell more than $40,000 each a year, while 348 farms have sales of between $10,000 and $20,000 a year. But 329 farms sell between $2,500 and $5,000 worth of farm products each year.

The county has 2,033 farms which is about 500 fewer farms than reported by the previous five-year Census. The average size of farms in the county was given as 212.5 acres, which is about 50 acres larger than the average size of the farms at the time of the previous five-year census.

The average value of the farmland per acre was reported by the census to be $283 per acre. This was $106 per acre more than the value as reported by the previous Census of Agriculture.

The census discloses that the average value of the farm, including land and buildings, in Stoddard county is $59,042. This is more than twice the value per farm as reported by the previous five-year census, which was $28,439.

Though the average farm was found to contain 212 acres, some were much larger and some smaller. There were 370 farms with acreage from 10 to 40 and 266 farms with an average acreage between 70 and 100 acres. The largest number of farms (327) have between 260 and 500 acres. Thirty-six had between 1,000 and 2,000 acres.

The census disclosed that 850 farms in the county grow mostly grain, and 263 are mainly cotton farms. The number of livestock farms was 244.

The census surveyed more than 1,000 farm owners in the county, and found all were white except five. A survey of part owners, a total of more than 500, showed five of these were Negroes.

Out of more than 1,800 farm operators reported by the census, all except 159 live on the farms they operate, while the 159 live elsewhere.

More than 800 operators were found to have non-farm jobs as well as farm jobs. Of this number about 475 worked more than 100 days a year at the non-farm jobs.

The farmers of the county sell 301,816 dozen eggs a year, and also more than 3 million pounds of whole milk.

Woman Wounded by Police Responding to Treatment

POST FALLS, Idaho AP - Lillian Jo Ramus, the young woman who charged out of a motel room, spraying bullets from a gold-plated M1 carbine at policemen and FBI agents, lay seriously wounded today but was responding to treatment.

One FBI agent was wounded in the shoot-out just before midnight Saturday before the 28-year-old woman fell with bullet wounds in the head and left hip. After emergency surgery at a hospital in Spokane, Wash., 20 miles away, she was taken off the critical list.

"After we told her to come out, she opened and closed the motel door several times, then fired a single shot inside the room, apparently to make us think she had shot herself," said FBI special agent Robert Rockwell of Coeur d'Alene, who was shot in the leg.

"We told the officers over the bull horn to stay back, then she opened the door and started firing," he said. There were "almost a hundred" officers surrounding the motel, said the wife of the owner, Mrs. David Doty.

The sawed-off M1 carbine had been fitted with a pistol handle so it could be used as a hand gun. Her wild flurry of shooting sent bullets through a screen door into Rockwell's car and flattened the tires on her own automobile.

The officers then opened fire with pistols, rifles and a shotgun. Miss Ramus fell to the ground, screaming. Police found a loaded 38-caliber revolver in her clothing, and a 22-caliber rifle and a .44 magnum carbine inside the room, along with ammunition for all the weapons and a fountain-pen tear-gas gun.

Authorities had been looking for Miss Ramus since last September 13, when she and Johan M. Bosley, 29, of Spokane, both held on forgery charges, used smuggled-in hacksaw blades to saw through the bars on a cell window in the Spokane city jail.

They jumped from their third-floor cell window to the roof of the men's quarters on the second floor, then two stories to the ground. Miss Bosley was seriously injured in the last jump and was left behind.

Miss Ramus and three other persons were accused of counterfeiting $40,000 worth of $20 bills, and printing $5,000 worth of fake unemployment, welfare and railroad pay checks. She is also charged with armed robbery in the $1,325 holdup of a market in a Seattle suburb.

Officers had watched the motel room all Saturday afternoon, hoping she might come outside. Her brother and an unidentified man visited her for several hours. Police said she apparently had returned to the Northwest to visit relatives.

Soviets Pull Teams out of U.S. Meets

MOSCOW (AP)—The Soviet Union announced today its track and field and basketball teams will not play against the United States this year in protest against the United States fighting Viet Nam, the official soviet news agency, Tass., reported.

The Soviet men's and women's track team was scheduled to meet the United States in Los Angeles July 23-24.

An American basketball team is in training in the United States for a trip to Russia.

In addition to the Russians, a Polish men's and women's track team was scheduled to compete against the United States in Berkeley, Calif., July 16-17.

An earlier report from Warsaw said the Polish team was planning to leave Wednesday for California.

A spokesman for the U.S. Embassy said that it had not been officially notified of the Soviet decision. The embassy had no immediate comment.

Earlier, the embassy had reported that about 100 Soviet track athletes had been granted visas for the United States. There had been no indication that the Russians would pull out.

The American basketball team of 13 players was due to come to Russia for a series of eight games, starting July 25 in Moscow. The team was to play here after games in East Europe.

Such decisions as the two teams reportedly took are made in this country only with Communist party approval — and often at party instigation.

Man Fatally Wounded Resisting Son's Arrest

NEWBURG, Mo. AP -- Walter Henson, 59, of Newburg, was shot to death Saturday night during a fight with two city officers who had arrested Henson's son.

Charles Slawson, city marshal and his deputy, Lester Slawson, arrested Jack Henson, 22, for a traffic violation.

The highway patrol said the elder Henson knocked the marshal down outside a pool hall and was starting to take the officer's gun when the deputy fired twice with a .32 caliber automatic pistol.

Henson, hit in the chest and arm, died on the way to a hospital.

$600,000.00 is a lot of money. Yet, all of us in the Hospital service area would be glad to give that much money if it were to save the lives of our loved ones.

In order to build the new wing to our hospital, all of us must give a generous amount -- as if it were to save our lives. We can do it.

2,751,000 Missourians Eligible to Vote in Fall

WASHINGTON, D. C. -- Missouri will have 2,751,000 persons old enough to vote (21 years old) in the election this fall, information released by the Bureau of the Census shows.

This will be 117,000 more than were old enough to vote in the last presidential election.

The bureau study projects the population for 1968 and claims that the state will have 2,777,000 old enough to vote in the 1968 presidential election. This will be 301,000 more than were eligible in 1964.

However, all Missourians do not go to the polls and vote, or at least have not in the past. The Bureau of Census reported that in 1964 two - thirds of those old enough to vote did for president. Only 65 persons out of 100 voted for representative in the House. In 1962 only 45 percent of those of eligible age voted for representative.

The glass container industry in this country employs more than 60,000 people working in 107 plants in 25 states.

Speaker Surprised By Own Firepower

CAPE GIRARDEAU, Mo. AP -- Supreme Court Justice James A. Finch Jr., was speaking Friday night when the paper his notes were written on caught fire.

With smoke and flames rising in front of him, the justice quickly threw the paper to the floor, stomped out the flames and commented: "I knew it was a hot speech."

The paper caught fire from a candle on a table in front of the speaker's stand. Using his charred notes, Finch continued his speech lauding Rush H. Limbaugh of Cape Girardeau, who has been an attorney for 50 years.

THE AGENCY AGAIN

Sen. J. William Fulbright (D Ark.) promises on Thursday, July 14, to demand a showdown vote on his plan to place the CIA under broader congressional scrutiny.

FOR MANY YEARS the Fun Thing in Washington has been to poke fun at The Agency. What is meant is the Central Intelligence Agency, the only government agency in the nation's capital which is automatically given capital letters in cocktail and other conversation.

Unfortunately, The Agency gives plenty of occasion for this kind of chaffing. Its arrogance is notorious; its hiding behind Department of State credentials -- even to wives' charge accounts at Washington department stores -- approaches ostrichism; its double-dealings, even limited to those on record, are numerous. It is accused of acting beyond its mandate, of spending lavishly.

In a remarkable hostile book -- and the CIA has had plenty of those written about it -- the authors of "The Invisible Government" (1964) say that the nation "spends about $4 billion a year" on the CIA. They go on:

"The exact figure is one of the most tightly held secrets of the government and it appears in none of the federal budget documents, public or private. It is unknown, in fact, even to many of the key figures in the Invisible Government. Because the intelligence community is carefully fragmented, those in one branch find it difficult to estimate the budgets of the others."

NOW ALL THESE CHARGES may be considered as nothing when one acknowledges that the subject is the central source of secret information about all one's national enemies -- and, for that matter, friends. Spying is always a dirty business and usually an embarrassing thing for a democracy. Much of the work of the CIA is research, some of which is pedestrian, and some of which is quite shrewd. Only in its "black" operations and in its "Department of Dirty Tricks" does it lay itself open to criticism.

But here the criticism is real, vital, and continuing. On Thursday Sen. J. William Fulbright is going to ask for a showdown vote in the Senate on a proposal that would increase congressional surveillance of CIA. The scheme would add representatives of the Foreign Relations Committee to representatives of two other powerful Senate committees, Armed Services and Appropriations, who now watch the operations of the national spy agency. The new group would be called the Select Committee on Intelligence Operations.

NUMEROUS ATTEMPTS have been made in Congress, far too many to be listed here, to put a shorter rein on The Agency. The answer invariably is that the House Armed Services subcommittee and the corresponding Senate subcommittee each maintains intimate surveillance on espionage and counter-espionage activities.

But a deeper consideration is involved. Sen. Fulbright, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, has raised the question that the people in CIA "greatly influence foreign policy." In debate on the Senate floor on May 16, Sen. Richard B. Russell (D Ga.), chairman of the Senate subcommittee on CIA, said that "it is sheer poppycock that the CIA is making its own foreign policy."

There is, of course, a vital shade of difference between the thrust and the parry -- the difference between "influencing" and "making" U. S. foreign policy. The Fulbright proposal, which he calls "modest," probably is doomed to failure. Too much publicity about national security is to be avoided. But perhaps a Senate debate about the $4 billion intelligence complex for which senators and representatives appropriate the money but know little about would be healthy.

THE VALUE of the seminars in part stems from the outside moderators brought in from various fields of expertise, in part from the work of a most professional staff, in part from the real and essential contributions of the seminarists themselves.

At a recent session, of which Malcolm F. Mallette, A.P.I. associate director and former managing editor of the Winston-Salem Journal, was the staff representative, the outsiders included, in addition to newspaper people, Dr. Zbigniew W. Brezezinski, director of the Research Institute on Communist Affairs, Columbia University; Prof. John Stoessinger of Hunter College; Dr. John H. Fischer, president of Columbia University Teachers College; Irving J. Rubin, Detroit Regional Transportation and Land Use Study; David A. Crane, associate professor of Civic Design, University of Pennsylvania; Whitney M. Young, Jr., executive director, National Urban League; and William F. Haddad, adviser to Mayor Lindsay of New York and former Inspector General of the federal Office of Economic Opportunity.

The seminars are shirtsleeves as well as off the record, and much of their educative value comes from nonscheduled after-hours discussions. One recent participant reports: "I was impressed mainly by the calibre of my fellow seminarists . . . I felt I was in a gathering of my peers . . . and proud to be there."

When the average person thinks about the American economy, he is inclined to think of "pure competition." Actually pure competition does not exist.

Most industries operate under an oligopoly situation -- that is, where the number of sellers is so small that they have to consider competitor reactions to every action they initiate.

Service stations typically fall into this classification on the local level. Sometimes a certain station's actions may result in a city-wide "gas war." The average firm under oligopoly would not consider raising the price in a price conscious market if competitors were not likely to follow, since his sales would drop greatly.

Although this situation is not composed of what the typical citizen may think of as "pure competition," it is not necessarily a bad situation.

In conditions of this type it is necessary that the firms advertise, especially if productions are different, such as "octane-blended" and "super premium."

Oligopoly may not immediately lead to the lowest price by producers, but advertising gradually tends to bring prices to the lowest feasible level. Since national producers have to enact aggressive policies in order to operate, the consumer is treated to lower prices and improved products.

Retailers who sell these products meet with the same situation. By direct advertising they increase local sales. Again a savings is effected to the consumer. Local level sales depend greatly on advertising to provide the stimulus for consumer shopping in certain businesses. In any type of market, however, a retailer can improve profits by advertising.

Colonel E. I. (Mike) Hockaday, Superintendent of the Missouri Highway Patrol, has called upon everyone to do his part in protecting children in traffic.

The Patrol Superintendent pointed out that over 70 pedestrians under 15 years of age were either killed or injured in accidents investigated by the Patrol last year.

"It's up to parents, motorists and the children themselves to combat this condition," declaredColonel Hockaday. "By example and education parents can teach their youngsters good habits of walking in traffic that will help protect them in our busy, motorized world. If you, as a parent, always look both ways before crossing streets and cross only at intersections or other designated crosswalks, your child will grow up with these same safe habits."

The Patrol Superintendent also stated to parents that safety rules should be as inflexible and require the same respect as other rules of conduct.

Colonel Hockaday then reminded motorists of their responsibility in regard to young pedestrians. "Children are a particularly great hazard to the motorist. A clear road ahead may suddenly contain a child retrieving a ball or pursuing his runaway pet. Particularly in residential areas, motorists should slow down and increase their alertness.

"Young boys and girls must also do their part to avoid a traffic mishap," the Colonel continued. "They should follow the instructions offered by their parents and do all they can to safeguard themselves in traffic."

Colonel Hockaday concluded by reminding both motorists and children to be extra careful during this time of the year. He said, "There will be many motorists and children on and around the roadways the next few warm months. I urge everyone to respect the rights of one another and do everything possible to prevent a traffic accident."

EVERYBODY'S HAPPY

This is a model story from Holland:

A merchant went to a farmer near Amsterdam to get a pound of butter. The farmer insisted on swapping the butter for a pair of woolen socks. The merchant went home and reported to his wife.

"We have a woolen bedspread," she said. "I'll unravel it and knit a pair of socks." So she proceeded to make the pair of socks and the merchant exchanged them for a pound of butter.

When the merchant needed more butter, his wife would unravel more of the bedspread to be exchanged for the butter. Finally, one day she had enough wool left for only one sock.

The merchant took it to the farmer and asked for a half pound of butter for it.

"No, I'll give you a full pound, said the farmer. "You see, I really don't wear the socks. My wife unravels the wool and uses it for knitting a bedspread, and there's just enough in this sock to finish it."

NO UKASE IS NEEDED

During the last session of Congress, there was a good deal of discussion over proposed measures that, allegedly, are needed in the name of "consumer protection". And during the coming session this matter promises to be a prominent one.

The proposed "protections", in almost every instance, consist of giving a federal bureaucracy sweeping powers over the goods from which the consumer may pick and choose. They involve labeling and the size and kind of packages. The whole idea is to impose a dull and sterile uniformity on a long list of consumer wares, including foods.

No one objects to laws which demand honest statements of weights and measures and what is inside the package. These laws are in effect everywhere, and if in some instances they need to be strengthened that certainly can be done without lessening competition and arbitrarily restricting the consumers' freedom of choice. There is no conceivable need, for instance, for a ukase from Big Brother which will tell a producer what kind of a package he may use in an effort to stimulate sales, and what a retailer can offer.

These proposals, it seems, are predicated on the idea that consumers are generally incompetent and just aren't able to look out for their own interests. Actually, as just about any storekeeper can tell you, the situation is utterly different. The housewife is a wily shopper. She compares, judges and selects. If she ever feels she has been deluded or exploited, she is through with that particular brand of merchandise -- and, possibly, with the store which sold it. She is her own best policeman.

LET'S END IT WITH THIS

It is no small thing that affects the daily lives of eight million people.

Yet eight million, to use a conservative figure, is only about 1/25th of the whole population and it would be understandable if many Americans were to look upon the New York transportation strike as a local affair.

Reaction to it might well be similar to reading a newspaper account of a famine in far-off India: One shudders, gives silent thanks that he is not involved, then turns to another page.

But what we witnessed is not merely another demonstration of the much put-upon New Yorker's amazing ability to cope with chronic inconveniences and periodic crises.

What took place has a national significance. It was a showdown between the right of workingmen to strike for improved conditions and the right of the state to forbid public employes to do so as jeopardizing the public weal.

It was an assault on civil authority and on the law itself, symbolized by union leader Michael Quill's tearing up of court orders on television, an act of phony martyrdom which put him in the same class as draft card-burners and others who place themselves above the law.

It was an appalling display of civic irresponsibility and contemptuous disregard for the welfare of the majority and as such marks a black day in the history of the labor movement, a negation of decades of maturing labor-management relations.

The strikers will, most likely, receive their increased benefits retroactively, after they finally agreed to arbitration and the strike ended. But who will retroactively compensate the city and its millions of citizens?

Who will pay them for their lost business, lost wages, lost appointments, worn-out shoes and tattered nerves?

No one possibly could, of course. But hard cash -- lots of it, in the form of severe punitive fines such as were leveled against John L. Lewis and his United Mine Workers back in 1947 -- will go far toward insuring that this strike is recorded as the last example of its kind.

THAT SITTING PIGEON

The American motorist has been a sitting pigeon for the road builders. Gasoline taxes have gone up year after year, in state after state, and have reached a level that no other necessity must carry.

The theory has been aired that motorists really don't mind -- that, in fact, they are willing and even eager to pay higher taxes to finance road building programs on just about any scale. But there are signs that this theory is without basis -- and that the overtaxed motorist is beginning to kick up his heels in protest.

Wisconsin provides a concrete example of that. On April 7th an advisory referendum was held there. It called for an expression of voter sentiment on a proposal to increase the state gasoline tax. Close to one million votes were cast. And the proposal was slaughtered by a six to one margin.

This has been hailed, with full accuracy, as "an encouraging victory for motorists everywhere." And it is the kind of victory that is needed in all the other states -- and in the federal government, which levies a 4 cent tax on every gallon of gas you buy.

FOR FREEDOM TOURS

June 22, Mrs. Hunt and I took three daughters, June 1, Helen 17, and Swanee 16, Miss Hanora O'Sullivan of New York and three other girls to Beverly Hills, California.

These youngsters comprised a team known as FREEDOM TEEN TOURS, each to make 3 1/4 minute freedom talks as best they could, of a factual and patriotic nature.

They were not critical of present day youth who join demonstrations against patriots and anyone otherwise dedicated to love of country. They did give positive testimony in behalf of our greatest nation and the freedom guaranteed only in the light of liberty.

These girls were aware that to develop eloquence and fully employ pathos to instill deep emotion, they will need to practice for many hours, just as they have practiced the songs they have sung for years.

On this first trip, they depended on emphasis and voice inflection; but in the short time, none of them developed the ability to induce joyous laughter and a minute later a shedding of a few tears.

In L.A. the most expert in the entertainment and publicity fields said the performance of the girls was definitely "a show," and their fresh, amateurish delivery made their message more appealing.

Upon their return from California, six of them began accepting invitations to speak at service club luncheons, breakfasts, at prayer meetings and small gatherings, where they have been warmly received and commended.

Others enlisted, two girls and a boy spoke at the Fourth of July Celebration featuring dancers and band from Minot, North Dakota, attending the National Convention of Elks. HLH

NEW YORK (AP) — Things a columnist might never know if he didn't open his mail:

Marriage expectancy is rising along with life expectancy. Average newlyweds today can look forward to living together 43 years — unless, of course, they try divorce.

Your skull is stronger and tougher than you think. It can stand weight of up to 3,600 pounds without being crushed.

Here's a wry footnote on togetherness: About 700 children in the United States commit murder each year — and in two-thirds of the cases the victim is a member of their own family.

Our changing ways: Only 50 years ago liver was regarded by many people as unfit for human consumption and it was fed chiefly to pets. Butchers often gave it away; now it is one of the most expensive of meats.

It has been found that mosquitoes are more likely to bite sick than healthy persons. Maybe it's because they figure that a guy with tired blood is also too tired to swat them.

Prosperity note: Four out of every five U.S. families now own at least one automobile. And one in five families owns two or more cars.

Quotable notables: "Never think that war, no matter how necessary, nor how justified, is not a crime. Ask the infantry and ask the dead." — Ernest Hemingway.

No civilized man wore pants until after the fall of the Roman Empire. Barbarians wrapped skins around their legs to keep out the cold. Roman civilians wore long robes, Roman soldiers short skirts to give them freedom of action. But by the year 600 most European men were clad in trousers.

It costs roughly $2,300 a year to keep an inmate in federal prison, just about the same amount it would take to send him to a good state university.

Musical tribute: More songs have probably been written about President Franklin D. Roosevelt than any other 20th century figure — over 100.

In normal conversation you speak about 125 words a minute. However, the mind can take in and understand from 400 to 700 words a minute — which fortunately, is about as fast as anyone can gossip anyway.

It was Adolf Hitler who observed, "The very first essential for success is a perpetually constant and regular employment of violence."

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON -- Ever since members of Sen. Dodd's staff copied his files, there has been national comment as to whether they were right in so doing.

U. S. Judge Alexander Holtzoff stated they were under obligation to report wrongdoing by the senator to the justice department but not to Jack Anderson and me.

In New York this week, a secret hearing is taking place under the auspices of former New York State Court of Appeals Judge Bruce Bromley, now retired, which illustrates the difficulties faced by the press and even the justice department in prosecuting high officials, especially when the official is connected with a senator or a potent congressman.

The secret hearing pertains to ex-Judge Vincent Keogh of the New York Supreme Court, who was convicted of taking a $30,000 bribe in a jukebox case involving Antonio (Tony Ducks) Corallo.

Though Judge Keogh was tried before one of the most respected of federal judges, District Judge Edward Weinfield, and found guilty by a jury in a verdict which was not reversed in the upper courts, nevertheless Keogh has now asked for a hearing on disbarment, and in this hearing the bribery case is virtually being tried all over again.

Judge Keogh is alleging that William Hundley, the respected justice department attorney who tried his case, withheld facts and acted unfairly. Hundley was an Eisenhower appointee, has remained on under the Democrats, is completely non-partisan, leaned over backward to prosecute the case fairly.

Significantly, the rehearing of the Judge Keogh case is held behind closed doors. The public and press are not permitted to be present.

Vincent Keogh is the brother of dapper Gene Keogh, the able congressman from Brooklyn, who is one of the most powerful Democrats in New York.

Note -- The bribery case against Judge Keogh was brought only after there was a certain amount of publicity in the press which focused attention on one of the worst scandals in judicial history since the conviction of Judge Martin Manton.

DODD'S DOCUMENTS

Michael V. O'Hare, former member of Sen. Dodd's staff, has made an interesting and forthright statement to Time Magazine as to why he helped remove documents from Dodd's office. It had been reported that O'Hare was motivated by revenge because his friend, Miss Terry Golden, had been fired by Dodd.

"In my testimony before the Committee on Standards and Ethics," O'Hare explained, "I VOLUNTEERED that I took the bulk of the documents with which I was particularly concerned on the weekend that Miss Golden was dismissed. Your article infers a possible motive of bitterness or revenge over her dismissal. Nothing could be further from the truth. Under ordinary circumstances he would have welcomed Miss Golden's departure from the office at this time. It was the equivalent of being exiled from Rome the day before I burned."

O'Hare then summarized the reason why he took this unusual step.

"We belived we were witness to grave misconduct in office," said O'Hare. "I played an extremely delicate role on the senator's staff for over six months, because I believed that this disclosure of Sen. Dodd's activities was in the public interest."

INSIDE THE WHITE HOUSE

President Johnson was holding a staff conference regarding the political problems of Viet Nam. He complained that he had tried suggestions put forward by almost everyone.

He had talked to Ambassador Lodge, he said, about the problems of Viet Nam, but Lodge's ideas hadn't achieved results. He said he had talked to Sen. Fulbright of Arkansas, the critic of his Viet Nam policy, but Fulbright's ideas hadn't worked.

"I put Lansdale over there," continued the President, "but nothing happened."

His voice sounded especially critical. At this point the President leaned back in his chair as he frequently does. Just behind him, and near enough so he could have bopped him on the head, sat General Landsdale.

Lansdale said nothing. He is the man who performed wonders in the Philippines in the way of village reform and was sent to Viet Nam to stabilize and built up its villages. There, however, he has not been successful.

One reason is that he can't get the same cooperation of top officials in South Viet Nam that he got in the Philippines. In the latter country Lansdale worked directly with President Magsaysay to cut red tape, got things moving. In South Viet Nam, Lansdale has to work through Ambassador Lodge, who doesn't like anyone going over his head to talk to top Vietnamese officials.

Battle to Influence LBJ on Red China Looms Between Reuther Brothers and Meany

WASHINGTON, D. C. -- East is East and West is West, but the twain does meet in the East-West Center, an intriguing government operation on the campus of the University of Hawaii in balmy Honolulu.

And soon that peaceful campus will be the site of battle between the forces of George Meany and the legions of the brothers Reuther -- Walter and Victor.

There have been early maneuverings in this new clash which has not yet made the national headlines.

But before this round is over next fall, the struggle between the blunt and inflexible anti-Communist AFL-CIO president George Meany, and the pro-coexistence Reuther brothers will involve the Central Intelligence Agency, the White House, the State Dept. and most of the nation's labor chiefs.

There will be insults and counter-charges -- but the basic issue is whether any sector of American labor should call for recognition of Communist China.

Meany is unmovably opposed to such dealings. The Reuthers are for it and for friendlier dealings with Soviet and Chinese bloc labor men.

Basically the infighting is to outflank the opposition and influence President Johnson who is opposed to such recognition and has said so to Meany.

But the President's advisers are split.

Thus the stakes are global. And every little maneuver has a meaning of its own. Therefore the latest move of the Reuthers brings us back to the East-West Center in Honolulu.

From September 5 to 9, the Center (which operates somewhat as an international university) will hold an Asiatic Industrial Labor Relations Conference. The program has been set under the title: Labor's Role in National Development. The guests have been invited.

Naturally they come from the broad sweep of that part of the world covered by the East-West Center -- Asia and Pacific rim nations, including the U.S.

This operation, it must be noted, is no ordinary conference.

The East-West Center is not actually part of the educational structure of the University of Hawaii.

East-West Center is a State Dept. project. It is under the Dept.'s Cultural Affairs section.

Funds for this Asian and Pacific studies group come from the general appropriation of the State Dept. The monies are voted by Congress -- which specifically earmarks the dollars.

When the House Appropriations Committee gets a little sticky about the allotment, Meany and his ubiquitously effective Washington lobbyist, Andy Biemiller, turn on a little labor pressure and the East-West chancellor breathes easier about his exchequer for the year.

Imagine, then, the spontaneous combustion inside the national AFL-CIO headquarters when the Asian labor relations conference program arrived all neatly printed.

Organizers of the conference, subsidized by some virtually anonymous foundation, invited no national AFL-CIO participant, though the U. S. labor federation is the free world's largest.

Instead, Victor Reuther, who has accused Meany and the AFL-CIO's International Affairs Dept. of being CIA fronts, was listed as the American labor participant. The young Reuther is the auto union's foreign affairs director.

Also on the schedule is a powerful Japanese labor official, Kaoru Ota, who has received the Lenin Peace Prize.

Obviously someone in the State Dept. had ignored the inflexibly anti-Soviet and anti-Peking national AFL-CIO headquarters. The face of American labor in the parley would be that of Victor Reuther.

The AFL-CIO burned up the wires. It shot off a letter of protest.

It is communicating with all delegates whom it considers friendly to its own policy. It will not participate.

The conference is important because it will influence important Asiatic and Australian labor leaders.

And today's labor leader often is tomorrow's prime minister.

But not the least element of this story is the fact that the State Dept., or a vital section thereof, turned to the Reuthers, and not the Meany forces, for advice.

Obviously the challenge has been hurled at Meany. He is not one at whom to hurl things -- without first duck!

Miss Donna Kathryn Conrad Is Wed to David Mikal Allen

SEDGEWICKVILLE -- The Whitewater Presbyterian church near here was the setting for the marriage, June 25, of Miss Donna Kathryn Conrad and David Mikal Allen, Patton.

The Rev. Stanley B. Hopper, assisted by the Rev. Clarence Liang, conducted the double ring service. Mrs. R. O. Laird, Jackson, was organist and Mrs. Wayne Johnson, Patton, and Peter R. Conrad, Jonesburg, were soloists.

The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David D. Conrad, Sedgewickville, and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Allen, Patton.

Entering with her father who gave her in marriage, the bride appeared in a gown of white peau de soie and Chantilly lace. Fashioned by her mother, the gown featured a fitted bodice, long-tapered sleeves which ended in points at the wrists and lace appliques at the neckline. Her skirt was semi-fitted, falling from soft pleats at the waistline, and it featured a panel of lace overlaid at the front and a chapel train of matching lace at back.

Her fingertip veil of illusion fell from a crown of pearls and rhinestones worn in her hair. Her bouquet was of carnations centered by an orchid and carried over a white Bible. She wore a strand of pearls and a gold heirloom bracelet which belonged to her grandmother, Mrs. Julius Conrad.

She walked down the aisle lined with white satin bows and baskets of white hydrangeas and honeysuckle and took her place at the altar, banked with baskets of hydranges and greenery. Lighted candels gleamed in candelabra.

Her attendants were Miss Sue Whaley, Sedgewickville, as maid of honor, a cousin, Miss Mary Bollinger, Jackson, and Miss Deborah Conrad, sister of the bride, as bridesmaids. They wore formal gowns of peau de soie similar to the bride's gown with fitted bodices overlaid with Chantilly lace. Each carried a bouquet of white carnations matching their dresses of apricot and aqua colors.

Martin Allen, Sikeston, was his brother's best man and Roy Allen and Tom Allen, Patton, served their brother as groomsmen. Jerry Boyd and Terry Conrad, brother of the bride, seated the wedding guests.

A reception followed in the church basement where the bride's table was covered with an apricot-colored lace cloth made by the bride's grandmother. Serving were Miss Peggy Whaley, Sedgewickville; Mrs. Robert G. Talley, Cape Girardeau; Mrs. Leland Nelson, Jackson, and Mrs. Harold W. Bollinger, Jackson, cousins of the bride. Mrs. Roy L. Allen of Patton was at the guest book.

After a short wedding trip, Allen returned to Charleston, S. C., where he is stationed with the U. S. Navy. The former Miss Conrad will continue in her position as clerk for the U. S. Department of Agriculture in Marble Hill.

Salt in Oceans

Major efforts are being made to find large-scale economical methods of extracting salt from the sea so that seawater can be used for drinking and other human needs. A gallon of seawater contains about ½-pound of salt and, it is estimated, there are about 4.5 million cubic miles of salt in all the earth's oceans combined.

NICKLAUS WINS BRITISH OPEN -- Jack Nicklaus, finally, has won the British Open Golf Championship. This had been the only title that Jack had never won. He scored a 70 in the final round and finished with a total score of 282 for the tournament winning the title for the first time.

NL Favored To Win 19th All-Star Game

ST. LOUIS, Mo. AP -- Right-hander Dennis McLain of Detroit and southpaw Sandy Koufax of Los Angeles were named today the starting pitchers for Tuesday's All-Star game.

The embarrassed American League, winner of only one of the last nine All-Star baseball games, is ready to go all out Tuesday against the favored National League's impressive array.

The National Leaguers have been taking blows for winning both the World Series and the All-Star Game in each of the last three years. Overcoming a 12-4 edge in the All-Star series once completely dominated by the American League, Willie Mays and Co. have taken the lead 18-17-1.

Sam Mele, the Minnesota skipper who will boss the American League, sounded the word before he left home.

"I'll use my eight starters all the way if it will help us win," said Mele. "I'm going to win this one. We'll play to win."

Walter Alston of the Los Angeles Dodgers can be counted upon to give his sluggers a similar message.

In the old days it was common for most of the pitchers to work the Sunday previous to the game. That no longer is the case.

Five of the 16 pitchers were used Sunday but the only starters were Steve Barber of Baltimore on the American side and Jim Bunning of Philadelphia on the National side. Pete Richert of Washington, Claude Raymond of Houston and Phil Regan of the Los Angeles Dodgers were used in relief.

Regan was a late addition to the staff. He was named by Alston to take the place of Bob Gibson when the St. Louis Cardinal ace came up with a sore elbow. Sam McDowell of Cleveland, who lasted less than an inning Sunday, also bowed out with a sore arm and was replaced by teammate Sonny Siebert.

Sandy Koufax of the Dodgers, the majors' top winner with a 15-4 record, worked Saturday. So did Gaylord Perry of San Francisco and Billy McCool of Cincinnati. Juan Marichal of San Francisco has rested since pitching a three-hitter for his 14th victory Friday. Bob Veale of Pittsburgh has not pitched since Thursday.

Three American League starters worked Saturday - Gary Bell of Cleveland, Catfish Hunter of Kansas City and Denny McLain of Detroit, the league's big winner with a 13-4 record. Jim Kaat of Minnesota and Mel Stottlemyre of New York were used Friday.

Both manager were scheduled to name their pitchers and batting orders at a morning news conference.

Alston, who had been undecided about coming to the game due to the illness of his mother, is expected to be on hand. If he cannot make it, Herman Franks of the league-leading San Francisco Giants will take his place.

All-Stars--Injuries struck the National League starting lineup forcing Alston to replace second baseman Joe Morgan of Houston with switch-hitting Jim Lefebvre of his Dodger club. Morgan suffered a broken knee cap a week ago.

Ron Santo, the Chicago Cubs, third baseman, retained his starting job, wearing a special face guard to protect his injured cheekbone.

The Nationals have the majors' top home run hitter in Hank Aaron of the Atlanta Braves in the outfield along with marvelous Willie Mays of the San Francisco Giants and Roberto Clemente of Pittsburgh.

Willie McCovey of San Francisco at first base, Lefebvre at second, Leo Cardenas of Cincinnati at short, Santo at third and Joe Torre of Atlanta as catcher completed the power-packed starting line-up.

Frank Robinson of Baltimore, anxious to show the Nationals that Cincinnati made a mistake in trading him, will team with Detroit's Al Kaline and Minnesota's Tony Oliva in the American outfield.

Rookie George Scott of Boston at first base, Bobby Knoop of California at second, Dick McAuliffe of Detroit at short, Brooks Robinson of Baltimore at third and Bill Freehan of Detroit as catcher are the other starters.

Brooks Robinson's 70 runs batted in top the majors and Frank Robinson and Kaline are tied for the league home run lead with 21.

All starters, except pitchers, must play at least three innings. No pitcher can go more than three, unless the games goes into extra inning.

The game will be carried on national NBC television starting at 2 p.m., EDT.

Players are straggling in from all points on makeshift schedules due to the airplane strike. Special planes are ready if unexpected emergencies develop.

St. Louis expects a capacity crowd of close to 50,000 in new Busch Memorial Stadium and the weather man promises to make it hot.

Potlatch Skids Past Dexter

DEXTER -- Sikeston Potlatch beat the host nine here Saturday night for the second time this season, this time by a 4-1 score.

Rudy Manley hurled a four hitter at the host team, collecting thirteen strikeouts for his third win of the season. Kenny Walker was credited with the loss as he gave up five hits and four runs, collecting eight strikeouts.

Walker had a rather easy first inning, striking out the first two batters, yielding a hit and striking out the fourth batter of the inning. In the Dexter half of the first inning Ayers reached first on an error by the first baseman and White and McCarthy followed with hits scoring Ayers on McCarthy's hit. Walker and Lane struck out for the next two batters of the inning and Kelly ended the inning flying out to the shortstop.

Potlatch bounced back in the second inning scoring two runs on two hits and continued to score in the third and fourth innings while holding Dexter helpless.

A's Take Two, Cards Drop One

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Kansas City barged into sixth place in the American League Sunday, taking both ends of a double header from Cleveland, 4-1 and 5-3.

St. Louis remained in sixth place in the National League although Atlanta picked up a game on the Cards as Houston edged their hosts in Busch Memorial Stadium, 6-5, behind Rusty Staub's two home runs.

The A's took the lead early in both games, scoring four times in the opening frame of the first game and three times in the first game and three times in the first inning of the second.

With two out, Mike Hershberger walked, stole second and scored on a double by Ed Charles. Dick Green followed with a single to score Charles and Joe Nossek slammed an inside the park homer.

Rookie Jim Nash, given the benefit of this cushion, proceeded to set the Indians down on three hits, one of which by Max Alvis, was ruled an inside the park homer in the fifth.

In the second game, the A's collected four hits, including a double by Roger Repoz, for their three runs in the first inning.

The Indians picked up single runs in the third, fourth and fifth innings to tie it before the A's surged ahead again in the sixth on another double by Repoz and Larry Stahl's line single to left.

Kansas City added an insurance run in the seventh when Campy Campaneris beat out a hit to short, stole second and scored on a surprise double by winning pitcher Jack Aker.

Bill Stafford started the second game but gave way to Wes Stock and Jim Duckworth. Aker took over to begin the seventh and earned the victory with three strong innings in which he allowed three hits, struck out two and walked no one.

The Cards took a short live 3-2 lead in the fifth, only to have Houston knot the count in the sixth, moved ahead again in the seventh, 5-3, then yielded as Staub hit his second home run of the game, a two-run shot in the eighth.

Bob Aspromonte scored the winning run on a single, a bobble, and Bob Lillis' single.

St. Louis loaded the bases with none out in the eighth, but Mike Cuellar came on in relief to retire the side without any damage.

Orlando Cepeda and Dal Maxvill had four hits apiece for the Cards. Cepeda's production included his 11th homer of the season.

Both teams will be idle until after the All-Star game Tuesday in St. Louis.

Copeland Named to Mental Health

Representative Fred E. Copeland, popular young legislator from southeast Missouri has joined the Board of Directors of the Missouri Association for Mental Health. In addition to acting in an advisory capacity on Legislative matters, Rep. Copeland will act as a member of the Planning Committee, Finance Committee and Membership Committee.

The Nominating Committee of the Missouri Association for Mental Health Board unanimously recommended Mr. Copeland because of his long and avid interest in the welfare of the mentally ill and mentally retarded. Gordon E. Weiss, Executive Director of M. A. M. H. stated that Mr. Copeland's voting record on mental health measures was more than enough to qualify him for a position of leadership in the 100,000 member organization. Mr. Weiss went on to state; "Gene Copeland, on countless occasions has given freely of his time in guiding and directing us in our legislative efforts; his door has always been open to us when we needed his advice and counsel. His presence on the board will lend great strength to our program and will be of great benefit to the mentally ill and mentally retarded in our state."

The Missouri Association for Mental Health was recently named by Governor Hearnes as the authority in Missouri for implementation of the states' comprehensive mental health planning. It is the first voluntary organization of its kind to be so named in the United States. It numbers 100,000 members across the state and is presently growing at an unprecedented rate. The Nominating Committee, in naming Rep. Copeland, noted that southeast Missouri has furnished many outstanding leaders in the mental health effort.

Farmers Eligible to Plant Alternate Crops

BENTON -- Farmers who signed up this year to participate in the cotton, wheat or feed grain programs but who have not been able to plant the crop because of natural disaster are urged to get in touch with the ASCS county office as soon as possible.

Roy Proctor, chairman of Scott county Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Committee, said newly enacted legislation now permits such farmers to obtain program benefits and to plant alternate crops on acreage intended earlier to be planted to one of the three crops. County ASC committees will make prompt arrangements to provide program benefits to farmers who have signed up as participants.

The chairman explained that if the county committee determined that an acreage of cotton, wheat or feed grains was not planted this spring because of flood, drought or other natural disaster, they can consider it as having been planted for the purpose of program eligibility and payments, provided a production-adjustment crop was not subsequently planted there for harvest in the current year. Production-adjustment crops include wheat, feed grains, tobacco, cotton, peanuts, rice, sugar beets, and sugar cane for harvest.

Farm program participants whose crops are lost after planting already had the opportunity to plant alternative crops on such acreage and still qualify for program benefits. Thus, farmers who signed up in the wheat, feed grain or cotton program and planted crops which later were destroyed by natural disaster may plant an alternative crop on the affected acreage and receive the available price-support payments as if the crop had been harvested.

Both provisions are effective for the same crop years -- 1966 through 1969.

THIS HOUSE, built in 1853, is going to be restored. It is one of the older houses in Scott County.

To Restore Old House

One of the older houses in Scott County is going to be restored. Mrs. James Handy Moore of Charleston said Friday.

The house, located near Tanner, was built in 1853 by Ben F. Hunter. In its construction, the lumber used was cut by a method known as whip-sawing, and in place of nails, wooden pegs were used.

The house is about 1 1/2 stories high and about 50 feet long. It has two rooms on the first floor, each room 20 by 20 feet, with a 10-foot breezeway between the rooms. A stairway leads from the breezeway to the upstairs rooms.

The house, when occupied, was heated by large fireplaces at each end of the house. The roof is cypress boards.

The old house was moved from its original site yesterday to a site nearer Route ZZ. Mrs. Moore said a new house would be erected on the original site of the Hunter home. Her husband's grandmother was born in the old house.

Medicare Passes First Week Much Smoother Than Expected

EDITOR'S NOTE -- Members of The Associated Press task force, who reported on the initial impact of medicare when it went into effect July 1, have kept a watch on hospitals in major cities during the program's first week. This is their report.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

After the first week of medicare, the nation's hospitals generally report they have much more paperwork but not many more patients.

A survey in 12 maor cities indicates that the number of 65-and-over patients entering hospitals has been mostly normal since the program of hospital insurance under Social Security went into effect July 1. Only Atlanta, with a 10 per cent gain, reported a significant increase.

"After all it's still the doctor who says when a patient should be admitted to a hospital," said Dr. Robert M. Hazen of Kansas City, advancing one reason for medicare's calm start.

Others given by hospital administrators included the availability of private medical insurance and other public health care, and the fact that medicare went into effect in summer, a normally slow time for hospitals.

In New York, said Dr. S. David Pomrinse, assistant director of Mt. Sinai Hospital, the city "has long made it a practice to give medical care to all people. The payoff is that we don't have any greater demand now than before."

The hospital's director of admissions, Nat Louis, said: "The urgency, the scare has passed. Anything that comes now is simply a matter of procedure and that can be worked out. Our only impact here is paper."

That was the major impact also at Jackson Memorial Hospital in Miami, where head clerk Barbara Maton said her dozen helpers are "up to here in forms, perforated tape and problems."

Some hospital people warned that the future course of medicare may not run as smoothly as the past week.

John Brewer, chairman of the Southern California Council of Hospitals, pointed out that in Los Angeles fall is a more popular time than summer for elective surgery.

"This is going to be a gradual thing, not a sudden one," he predicted, reporting that only cataract operations have increased in his area since July 1.

The real impact of medicare lies in the future, said Sister Mary James, administrator of Hotel Dieu House of God, a New Orleans hospital.

"I have been told that the people now over 65 are people who always have avoided doctors or hospitals whenever possible and that the real medicare load will come when younger people reach the age of 65," she said. "I think there is some truth in this."

Those among the nation's 19 million persons 65 and over who have taken advantage of medicare so far had high priase for the program.

"If I didn't have it, I wouldn't be here," said Valentine Kuffel, 79, from his bed in St. Elizabeth's Hospital in Chicago. He was admitted July 4 for surgery.

"Of course I'm happy," said Vincent Locasio, 75 a retired carpenter, at Research Medical Center in Kansas City. "Why shouldn't I be? A lot of people have nothing to go on. This was necessary."

Not all patients admitted under medicare cannot afford private care. At Miami's Jackson Memorial Hospital, Raymond S. Perrine, 66, a former Pennsylvania coal magnate, was admitted after he got back from a world cruise last month. He found trouble developing with his Pacemaker, an instrument that keeps his heart beating.

"I thought if I could go a few more days, I could get in under medicare," said Perrine, who now lives in Bradenton, Fla. "so I negotiated with the doctor and was admitted July 2 and operated on July 3.

Perrine was happy to discover that medicare covered the cost of the Pacemaker, a delicate electronic battery inserted in a patient's body. He had deposited $500 to cover its cost but was told he would get the money back.

"I'm glad to hear it," he said. "I don't ever disregard the value of a dollar."

State Highway Commission Issues Call For Bids July 28 Totaling $14,750,000

The Missouri State Highway Commission has issued a call for bids July 28 for highway construction and improvements estimated to cost $14,750,000 on about 60 miles of the state's highways extending into 20 counties and the cities of Jefferson City, Springfield, Poplar Bluff and Dexter.

The call covers about 28 1/2 miles of Interstate system work estimated at $8,000,000 and another 14 1/2 miles of Supplementary (farm to market) system projects estimated at $1,750,000.

Pemiscot: Interstate Route 55 -- construction of two safety rest areas about 2 1/2 miles northeast of the Arkansas state line. The project consists of shelter houses, comfort stations, water systems, lighting, signing, access ramps and parking areas.

Pemiscot: Interstate Route 55 -- fencing and guard cable along a five mile stretch from the Arkansas state line northeast to south of Route E.

Scott-Mississippi: Interstate Route 57 -- fencing and guard cable along an 11 mile stretch from Interstate Route 55 at Miner east to Route UU southeast of Charleston.

Primary system work includes:

Pettis-Saline: U. S. Route 65--8.7 miles grading, bridging and laying one 24-foot wide portland cement concrete pavement from Interstate Route 70 south towards Sedalia. Includes a new bridge over Heath's Creek.

Saline: U. S. Route 65 -- highway beautification (planting trees and shrubs) about a quarter of a mile south of the Route 20(A) junction at Marshall.

Miller: U. S. Route 54 -- 5.2 miles grading, bridging and some paving from Route V, near Bagnell, south to Camden county line. The work includes about two miles of laying two 24-foot wide high type pavements at the north end and about a half mile of laying one new pavement and widening and resurfacing the existing pavement at the south end of the project. Bootheel To Be Warmer

Bootheel residents can look forward to warmer than normal July temperatures and near normal rainfall this month. This will call for some irrigation, much air conditioning, and frequent trips to nearby water resorts.

Low pressure centers are not generally active in the mid-south in this summer month. Except for years when tropical storms change the pattern, moisture spreading northward from the Gulf of Mexico is acted upon by mid-summer heat to stir up scattered thundershower activity. An increase in such activity along the Gulf Coast region is expected to produce heavy rains from Texas to the Carolinas and Florida. Enough moisture will penetrate into Arkansas and Southeast Missouri to provide near normal rainfall for July 1966.

Normal July precipitation for the Bootheel as a whole is 3.22 inches. Normals for individual cities are:

Caruthersville 3.56 inches; Fisk 3.29 inches; New Madrid 3.79 inches; Poplar Bluff 3.33 inches; Dexter 3.22 inches; Morehouse 2.86 inches; Parma 3.45 inches; Sikeston 3.12 inches.

Short term averages for other Bootheel locations:

Charleston 3.26 inches; Malden 3.52 inches; Portageville 3.14 inches; Kennett 3.18 inches.

These amounts of rain fall far short of crop demand in normal years. Where moisture is available, plants will generally use over three inches more water than is provided by showers. Following a dry June in which some sub-soil moisture reserves were used, this will mean moisture stresses for corn and cotton, particularly on sandy soils. June rainfall for Bootheel Weather Bureau stations was:

Cairo 2.94 inches; Charleston 2.15 inches; Malden 1.98 inches; Caruthersville 0.92 inches; Sikeston 4.43 inches; Poplar Bluff 1.55 inches; Kennett 2.78 inches; Portageville 1.40 inches.

Early reports from our Bootheel raingage network showed 2.10 inches at M. E. Allens Farm at Puxico, 1.40 inches at the Dolphin Gin, Steele and at the Crews Reynolds Gin at Caruthersville.

Corn is already using large daily amounts of water and has had several irrigations on some farms. Cotton demands will increase now that warm nights have increased growth, particularly as fruiting becomes heavy later in the month. Usually we can expect rain on 9 to 11 days of the month, and amounts will vary considerably in thundershowers. Daily and five day weather outlooks will be particularly useful in scheduling harvest of hay, peaches and watermelons since they point out expected intervals between wet periods.

Daytime temperatures will rise into the 90s on most days of the month. Readings above the 100 degree mark have not been common in recent years. However, with above normal heat in the Bootheel, Kennett had 16 days of 100 degrees or higher in 1954. That included 16 of the first 19 days of a sweltering month. Malden had 12 such days in that year and Portageville 11.

Cattle feed better where shade and water are plentiful during prolonged hot spells. Potato growers will want to watch temperatures during harvest to prevent heat damage to freshly dug tubers. Some farmers discontinue harvest when temperatures rise above 85 degrees.

Mites tend to increase in cotton during hot, dry weather. Humans have hot weather problems too. We can expect to spend more on electrical power to run air conditioners. An increase in water sports calls for reminders to guard against excessive exposure to sun, and to leave the water promptly at the earliest signs of approaching electrical storms. Thunderstorms are also a hazard to the fisherman and the golfer.

THE CITY OF SIKESTON, MO.
Resolution

A resolution declaring the necessity for the construction of 1 1/2" hotmix asphaltic pavement on 6" soil cement base with concrete curb and gutter on Frisco Street from Ruth Street to Dorothy Street extended in accordance with plans & specifications in the City of Sikeston, Missouri; stating the nature of the improvement; the estimated cost and providing that payment for all of the improvement shall be made by special tax bills levied and assessed against the abutting property. Be it resolved by the Council of the City of Sikeston, State of Missouri, as follows: SECTION 1: That the Council of the City of Sikeston, Missouri, deems and declares the construction of said Street necessary to the welfare and improvement of the City of Sikeston. SECTION 2: That the nature and scope of the improvement shall consist of furnishing all cost, including labor, materials and transportation necessary for the complete construction of the improvement. SECTION 3: That the estimated cost of the improvement is $4.50 per lineal foot of abutting property, to be charged against the lots and tracts of land abutting the improvement. SECTION 4: That payment for all of the improvement shall be made by special tax bills evidencing special assessments against the abutting property in the manner specified by the statutes of the State of Missouri and the ordinances of the City of Sikeston, Missouri, because in the opinion of the City Council the General Revenue fund of the City of Sikeston is not in a condition to warrant an expenditure therefrom to pay for the improvement. SECTION 6: That the City Clerk is hereby authorized and directed to furnish a copy of this Resolution to a daily newspaper of general circulation in the City of Sikeston, so that it shall be published for seven consecutive insertions. Gunmen Get $10,000 In Independence Holdup

Donnici said three men in a car stopped behind his car at the rear of the store. Two men got out.

"When I saw the men were wearing stocking caps over their faces I knew it was a holdup," Donnici said.

He and Beisly were forced to walk away while the men grabbed the money and drove off.

The bandits' car was found 30 minutes later. The license had been reported stolen.

ANN LANDERS
Answers Your Problems

Dear Ann Landers: I have been married to Lee (made-up name) for nine years. We have four children and a nice home in the suburbs. Lee is a good husband and father and we have a happy marriage.

Tonight, by accident, I ran across some cigaret paper for rolling your own. It was tucked in the back of Lee's desk drawer along with an envelope that had been taped and stapled. I opened the envelope and found some dried particles of what appeared to be a plant. It is dark brown in color and has some tiny seeds mixed in. Can this be marijuana?

I have not told my husband that I found the envelope and I don't know if I should. Please tell me what you know about marijuana and what I ought to do about it.--FRIGHTENED

Dear Frightened: Obviously, I could not attempt to analyze any substance without first seeing it, and in this instance, even if I saw it I wouldn't be of much help. I don't know what marijuana looks like.

If you take the contents of the envelope to an organic chemist for analysis and if it turns out to be marijuana, prepare yourself for questioning by legal authorities. Possession of marijuana is against the law.

It seems inlikely to me that your husband could be on pot and you would not know it. This weed produces exhilaration which you would surely recognize as universal behavior. Discuss the problem with your family doctor and accept his counsel

Dear Ann Landers: Who is right? My husband's sister has two children who are in grammar school. Her son had a tenth birthday several days ago and my husband and I sent the youngster a very nice gift.

Yesterday we received a handwritten letter to "my dear Unkle and Ant" thanking us for the "beautiful presunt." The stationery was folded in a sloppy, haphazard manner and the envelope looked as if he had carried it in his pocket for a week.

I showed the letter to my husband and he said he thought it was "fine" that the kid took the time and trouble to write a thank you letter. I said it was the very least the boy could do. I also said I thought his mother should have looked at the letter before he sent it, and corrected his spelling and instructed him to write it over. Do you agree with me?--OLD WORLD THINKER

Dear Thinker: No, I do not agree with you. The child's note was an expression of appreciation. He thanked you in his own words--in his own way. For a 10-year-old, "Unkle and Ant" isn't too bad. You should see the letters I get from high school kids complaining about "kerfew" and not enough "freedum."

Dear Ann Landers: I am a 15-year-old girl who is heartbroken. I went with Bart for six months. I knew the minute I laid eyes on him that he was very mixed up. I was his psychiatrist, his mother figure, his sweetheart and his parole officer. I was also his banker. He still owes me $9.00.

After I gave him everything he wanted he told me that I was too bossy and then he dropped me for another girl. He needs me but he doesn't know it. Please tell me how to get the message across to him. --LINDA

Dear Linda: Never mind about getting the message across to him. Concentrate on the message he got across to you. You need this fellow like Custer needed more Indians. Consider yourself lucky to be rid of the guy.

When necking becomes petting, watch out! To learn how the smart girl keeps both her dignity and her boy friend, send for Ann Landers' booklet, "Necking and Petting--And How Far To Go." enclosing with your request 25¢ in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

THE PRAYER
For Today From The Upper Room

ONE FLAG FOR ALL!

1966 is the 190th Birthday of the Spirit of '76

AN EDITORIAL

1966 looks upon a world filled with maniacal international politicians jockeying for power. The effects reach into every home in the land . . . pressuring emotions with endless strain. The thought occurs to us how tragic it would be if some misguided nation misread the meanings of the marches and counter marches the picketings and counter picketings of small groups of protesters who have big mouths and small support from the rank and file citizenry who make up 95% of our population. There always have been little "exception groups" in America. There is an opposite side to every belief, conviction and ideal in our nation. Yet the Spirit of '76 remains as strong in the hearts of most Americans as it was when it was born 190 years ago.

Differences of opinion among Americans have been underlined by strong public stands of splinter groups since the end of World War II. Throughout these demonstrations the 95% majority who disagreed with each other in many areas were never far apart on the main issue: the unity of our republic is inviolable.

As the important national holidays roll around again for the 190th time, the time comes to show the colors on every home as a testimonial to our national unity and love of country. Every American should join this host of flag flyers. Get a home flag set now. Fly it on your home on Armed Forces Day, Decoration Day, Flag Day, Independence Day, Veterans Day and on Lincoln's and Washington's Birthdays, too . . . and on the fifteen important national holidays on which the flags should fly. Get a flag. Any U.S. Flag. Anywhere. But fly it. Make this a must on your list of things to do. Show the children how to raise it in the morning and take it down at twilight. This is the American way . . . and should be preserved forever as a national tradition.

Today In U. S. History

Today is Monday, July 11, the 192nd day of 1966. There are 173 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1804, two revolutionary war leaders, Aaron Burr and Alexander Hamilton, met in a pistol duel in Weehawken, N.J. Two shots were fired and Hamilton fell, mortally wounded.

On this date

In 1767, our sixth president, John Quincy Adams, was born.

In 1810, Holland was annexed to the Napoleonic empire.

In 1814, a British fleet captured the town of Eastport, Maine.

In 1937, American composer George Gershwin died.

In 195?, General Dwight D. Eisenhower was nominated for president on the first ballot at the Republican National Convention in Chicago.

Ten years ago—The French government approved the plan for Euratom—an atomic energy commission composed of representatives of the six Common Market nations.

Five years ago—A United Air Lines DC8 jetliner careened off the runway at Denver airport, hit a truck and caught fire. Seventeen persons aboard the plane and a man in the truck died.

One year ago — President Johnson issued a report on the effect of the 1964 civil rights act during its first year. He said the letter of the law had been complied with, but added: "The next step is to achieve compliance in spirit."

"SCALDED AND COCKED"

My grandfather served in the Indianan Infantry in the internal struggle to preserve that nation. My brother went over with the 1st division and shortly after I enlisted in the U. S. Navy for four years.

In World War II my oldest sons served in the conflict. My son, after this served in the Korean dual.

My two younger sons served their time in the Air Corps, and the Spanish American Veterans State. We were all volunteers. I hereby wish to state that I was a volunteer in the Sea Bees in World War II and that I was sworn in and never called and I must still be on the rolls. After this introduction I wish to state this fact.

I am past the three score and 10 and I still would like to walk the streets and drive the highways as a free man.

And I wish to state that regardless of his nationality, his place of call or whether he is a teenager, that I will protect myself or any persons that might be with me and I will not ask any questions for I feel that I should be allowed to walk the streets of any town or city in this "Land of the Free."

ON a transoceanic flight a passenger was carrying on a conversation with the stewardess with the obvious purpose of impressing his fellow passengers with his English.

He asked the stewardess: "How high is this plane?"

She answered, "29,000 feet."

He nodded solemnly, thought for a moment, then called the stewardess again and asked, "How wide is it?"

James Archer Returns From Vietnam

by CAROL MILLER

After completing a year's tour of duty in South Vietnam, Major James H. Archer is home with his family in Sikeston. He is a member of the famous Green Berets, a unit of special volunteer forces which are trained in many areas of military knowledge.

"These special forces were sent to Vietnam in 1961 as advisors to the South Vietnamese. They are responsible for training and equipping the Civilian Irregular Defense Group which is similar to a home guard. Detachments are stationed all over South Vietnam," said Major Archer.

On his last assignment, Major Archer was executive officer for a special (C) detachment which was one of four in Vietnam. It was located at Bien Hoa about 30 miles north of Saigon.

During his 16 years in the service, Major Archer has been stationed at various points within the United States and spent three years in Germany. Since last July when he left for Vietnam his family--wife, Jane, and daughters, Melissa, Susan, Laura, and Jane--has lived in Sikeston.

This was Major Archer's second tour of duty in Vietnam in the special forces which he joined in 1962. During his first tour in 1964, he commanded a 12 man (A) detachment and was slightly wounded. At this time his family was staying at Fort Brad, North Carolina.

On both trips over he made only two stops--one in California and the other at Okinawa.

Major Archer attended language school to learn the Vietnamese language which helped him become acquainted with the people of Vietnam. He stated, "I like the Vietnamese people very much. They are good people." At some later time Major Archer would like to visit Vietnam and his many friends there with his family.

He continued to say that there was no comparison between the culture of the United States and that of the Vietnamese. "Their customs, food, standard of living, and economy are different from ours. They also do not have near the luxuries that the United States does."

One similarity between Sikeston and Vietnam that Major Archer mentioned was the hot, humid climate.

However, he said that it does rain in Vietnam. From May to September the summer monsoons from the Pacific plague the southern delta area with heavy rains; then from September to March the weather shifts and the moonsoons hit the northern part of the country.

At the end of July when his leave is over, Major Archer and his family will report to Fort Leavenworth, Kansas.
